

Iraq Defiance Gets Stiff UN Response

Security Council Calls Freeze On Inspections 'Unacceptable'

UNITED NATIONS, New York — The Security Council on Thursday declared Baghdad's freeze on cooperation with UN weapons inspectors "totally unacceptable" and called for an "urgent resumption" of dialogue between the inspectors and Iraq.

Kofi Annan, the UN secretary-general, called Baghdad's move a "violation of Security Council resolutions and the memorandum of understanding."

He was referring to the agreement he extracted from President Saddam Hussein of Iraq in February, the last time Iraq cut off the inspectors. That agreement averted military conflict with Britain and the United States.

Mr. Annan said he believed that the current crisis with Iraq could be resolved peacefully, however.

"I don't think we will need military forces," Mr. Annan said in response to a question after he attended closed-door Security Council discussions on Iraq's decision.

"It might be helpful to engage the Iraqis much more closely than we have hitherto done," he said, urging that their concerns be heard.

The secretary-general said he had spoken with Tariq Aziz, the deputy prime minister of Iraq, and that the Iraqi position was "not a closed one."

Talks over inspections broke down Monday when the chief UN weapons inspector, Richard Butler, refused to supply an immediate certification that Iraq had destroyed all of its weapons of mass destruction — chemical and biological arms and long-range missiles.

Such a testimonial is necessary for the Security Council to lift economic sanctions imposed in 1990 after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. The sanctions have crippled the Iraqi economy by banning the free sale of oil, the country's economic mainstay.

Mr. Butler has said that he was close to giving such approval regarding Iraq's chemical and missile programs but that he needed more information on biological weapons.

The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Bill Richardson, welcomed the Security Council statement, which was agreed to unanimously.

"The United States is very pleased with the outcome of the meeting," Mr. Richardson said. "We were also very pleased with the forcefulness of the secretary-general's briefing."

Making good on its threat Wednesday to limit arms inspections, Iraq on Thursday banned surprise checks by the UN nuclear agency and stopped a team of weapons inspectors, telling them they could "monitor" only sites that had already been checked.

Iraqi escorts refused Thursday to accept

See IRAQ, Page 12

Congo Rebels Capture Port In the West, Widening War

By Howard W. French
New York Times Service

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast — Anti-government rebels in Congo seized control Thursday of a strategic oil port town in the far western part of the country, according to rebel spokesmen and foreign diplomats, significantly widening their campaign to wrest power from President Laurent Kabila.

The seizure of the town, Moanda, an important oil depot southwest of Kinshasa, along with the neighboring city of Banana, confirms the dramatic opening of a second front in a five-day-old war that until now had been largely confined to the country's far-eastern regions.

On Tuesday, the Congolese government said the rebels hijacked a Boeing 707 aircraft in the eastern part of the country and flew it 1,600 kilometers (1,000 miles) west, to the town of Kitona, where soldiers from the defeated army of the late President Mobutu Sese Seko were being retrained for service in Mr. Kabila's army by trainers on loan from neighboring Rwanda.

Although it has consistently denied any involvement in the current fighting, according to Western diplomats, Rwanda, which backed Mr. Kabila's overthrow of Mr. Mobutu 15 months ago, has emerged as a major backer of the new anti-Kabila rebellion.

In his first public appearance since the outbreak of the rebellion in the eastern border cities of Goma and Bukavu on Sunday, Mr. Kabila threatened at a news conference in Kinshasa to "take the war back to Rwanda, where it came from."

Relations between Mr. Kabila and his former allies have broken down over a number of issues that once united them, including Mr. Kabila's gradual marginalization of Congolese Tutsi — the ethnic cousins of Rwanda's own leaders — in his government, and the failure to suppress anti-Rwandan guerrilla activity in eastern Congo.

Responding to Mr. Kabila's threat Thursday, a Rwandan government spokesman told the BBC: "Aren't they putting the cart before the horse? Hadn't they better take care of their problems with the rebels?"

The opening of a western front so near to Kinshasa comes as bleak news to Mr. Kabila, who has already lost nearly all of the international friends — from Washington and other Western capitals to many of the leaders of central and southern Africa — who supported his armed drive for power.

Although heavy fighting was said to be still under way in areas southwest of the capital, any consolidation of their position in the southwest by the insurgents would enable them to interrupt electricity supplies from the huge Inga dam nearby and stop food and fuel deliveries to Kin-

See CONGO, Page 12

Newstand Prices
Andorra	10.00 FF Lebanon
Antilles	12.50 FF Morocco
Cameroon	1.600 CFA Qatar
Egypt	EE 5.50 Reunion
France	10.00 FF Saudi Arabia
Gabon	1.100 CFA Senegal
Italy	2.800 Lire Spain
Ivory Coast	1.250 CFA Tunisia
Jordan	1.250 JD U.A.E.
Kuwait	700 Fils U.S. M.

Monica Lewinsky arriving at the courthouse Thursday.

Lewinsky Testifies Before Grand Jury

At the White House, Business as Usual

By Brian Knowlton
International Herald Tribune

WASHINGTON — The investigation that has gripped Washington for months entered its endgame Thursday, as a solemn Monica Lewinsky, encircled by uniformed U.S. marshals, was whisked into a federal courthouse here to answer questions about her alleged sexual relationship with President Bill Clinton.

Ms. Lewinsky, 25, smiled wanly, appearing visibly nervous as she climbed out of a shiny black sports-utility vehicle. She wore a dark blue suit and a white blouse.

She was silent as she entered the courthouse through a side entrance, amid a furious whirling of shutters from a sea of tripod-mounted, long-lensed cameras camped yards away. More than a hundred reporters and cameramen were on hand, some from Europe and Asia. Their trucks, vans and satellite dishes lined Constitution Avenue for a block; their cameras and white-topped tents filled the sidewalks.

Inside, Ms. Lewinsky was allowed to use a back elevator normally reserved for judges. Grand jury deliberations are secret, and there was no indication of what Ms. Lewinsky said Thursday. But she was expected to tell prosecutors and the 23 grand jurors that she and Mr. Clinton had had a sexual relationship, beginning when she was a 21-year-old intern at the White House, and that he had discussed in hypothetical terms ways for her to conceal it.

The independent counsel Kenneth Starr is examining serious charges of perjury, subornation of perjury and obstruction of justice against Mr. Clinton, who has denied any wrongdoing. Prosecutors leading the questioning Thursday did not include Mr. Starr himself, court sources said. The independent counsel is said, however, to want to complete Ms. Lewinsky's questioning quickly, perhaps in three days or less.

Lewinsky emerges from seclusion. Page 3.

On what potentially was a day of peril for the Clinton presidency, aides at the White House described a business-as-usual atmosphere.

Mr. Clinton, appearing relaxed and composed, spoke to a Rose Garden gathering about gun control. When his speech ended, the Marine band burst loudly into music and a smiling Mr. Clinton, turning to shake hands with the uniformed police officers behind him

See CLINTON, Page 12

House Panel Cites Reno in Election Fund Inquiry

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A House committee voted Thursday to cite Attorney General Janet Reno for contempt of Congress for failing to turn over reports recommending that she seek an independent counsel to investigate campaign fund-raising abuses.

The panel moved to the extraordinary confrontation on a 24-19 vote. All Republicans supported the motion. Eighteen Democrats plus Bernard Sanders of Vermont, an independent, opposed it.

"The committee has a need to see these documents," said Representative Dan Burton, Republican of Indiana, chairman of the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee.

Representative Henry Waxman, Democrat of California, denounced the action as "political theater."

"This odious threat of contempt is beneath contempt," he said.

Mr. Burton said a vote by the full House on the panel's recommendation to cite Ms. Reno for contempt would not come before Congress's August recess, and he held out hope that Ms. Reno would turn over the reports before then.

The committee's insistence that she turn over the two memos, Ms. Reno later told reporters, constituted "a form of political tampering that no prosecutor in America can accept" and could jeopardize the ongoing investigation.

"We will try our level best to see that an accommodation is reached," Ms. Reno said.

"But I simply have to draw a line and stand up for what I believe to be a very important principle: Prosecutions in America must be free of political influence."

If the House approved the contempt citation, the matter would go to the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia to determine whether a contempt order should be issued. If the court issued a contempt order, Ms. Reno could be subject to a year in prison and a $10,000 fine.

HORSE CHARGE — An Israeli mounted policeman knocking down an ultra-Orthodox protester Thursday, sending his hat flying, as a group sought to obstruct road building on the site of ancient graves.

AGENDA

As If You Didn't Know This Already...

WASHINGTON (AFP) — Two American scientists have confirmed what many workers already knew: It rains more on weekends.

Their statistics, published Thursday

Books Page 7
Crossword Page 8
Opinion Pages 6-7
Sports Pages 20-21

The Internet Pages 4, 9
The IHT on-line www.ihf.com

in the British scientific journal Nature, showed 22 percent more rainfall on Saturdays than on Mondays.

Randall Cerveny and Robert Balling, Arizona State University climatologists, said pollution has a direct impact on Atlantic Coast precipitation.

They said coastal rain levels increase between Thursdays and Saturdays and start leveling off Sundays.

"The human week is not a natural time period," said Mr. Balling. "Human effect on weather is the only explanation."

The Dollar

New York	Thursday 4 P.M.	previous close
DM	1.772	1.7695
Yen	144.275	143.95
FF	5.942	5.9335
Pound	1.6348	1.6365

The Dow

Thursday close	percent change
+30.90	8,577.68 + 0.36%

S&P 500

Thursday close	percent change
+8.21	1,089.84 + 0.76%

Nasdaq

Thursday close	percent change
+41.31	1,829.51 + 2.32%

Asia Is Not the Only Place Carmakers Face Trouble

By John Schmid
International Herald Tribune

FRANKFURT — Blindsided by economic recession across Asia this past year, North American and European carmakers now are facing contractions in their home markets, analysts and industry executives say.

"The golden years are over," said Robert Halver, an analyst in Frankfurt for Delbruck & Co.

Such a pullback after seven years of growth could hasten the wave of mergers and acquisitions among automakers, particularly in the crowded European car sector, analysts say.

Bernad Pischetsrieder, chairman of BMW, was among the first executives to issue a warning. The German car market — the biggest in Europe — has just peaked, he told German media, adding that the U.S. auto market would enter a "crisis" by the year 2000.

Analysts generally agree with him, particularly over the expected downturn in the United States. Not all predict a full-blown "crisis," but some expect car sales to drop by as much as 6 percent to 7 percent next year from the current level of about 15 million vehicles.

"It is widely felt among investors that the next move in the U.S. vehicle market will be down," said John Lawson, an analyst in London with Solomon Smith Barney. "The fact that Mr. Pischetsrieder said it gave it greater credibility."

In Europe, where government incentives in nations such as Italy have expired, Juergen Roethig at the Frankfurt bank B. Metzler & Co. estimates that the downturn in 1999 will exceed 3 percent in volume from about 13.5 million vehicles currently.

Mixed German jobs data. Page 13.

Figures released Thursday show that the looming U.S. downturn already is playing a role in the proposed Daimler-Benz takeover of Chrysler. In a filing with U.S. regulators, the companies said that Daimler's pretax earnings would more than triple, overtaking Chrysler's within two years. Analysts attribute the discrepancy to the conditions in the respective home markets.

See AUTOS, Page 8

Rebuke to Arafat: 2 Quit

Leadership of Palestinian Authority Is Assailed

By Douglas Jehl
New York Times Service

JERUSALEM — In a fresh sign of dissatisfaction with Yasser Arafat's governance, two of his cabinet ministers resigned Thursday to protest what they said had been the Palestinian leader's failure to address internal problems within the Palestinian Authority.

The resignations came a day after Mr. Arafat stunned many members of the Palestinian Legislative Council by unveiling a long-postponed cabinet shuffle that failed to address their calls on him to root out graft and mismanagement.

One who resigned was Hanan Ashrawi, one of the most prominent Palestinians on the international stage. The other was Abdul Jawad Saleh, who had voiced discontent with Mr. Arafat before but who went on Thursday to accuse the Palestinian leader of blocking his own efforts to crack down on corruption.

"When I fought corruption in my own ministry, I referred some of the high-ranking officials to the attorney general," Mr. Saleh, former agriculture minister, said. "The chairman himself interfered to stop any legal proceedings against them."

Mrs. Ashrawi said that her relationship with Mr. Arafat was "based on mutual respect" but complained that changes within the Palestinian authority meant that "decision-making has in a sense been reduced to a few people."

The resignations were a new blow to Mr. Arafat's prestige, which has suffered since his return from exile in 1994 to become chairman of the Pal-

See MOTHER, Page 12

See PALESTINE, Page 12

50 Years After Her Babies Died, a Mother Is Arrested

By John J. Goldman
Los Angeles Times Service

NEW YORK — For decades it was a great medical mystery — how eight young children from one family could die so suddenly and so swiftly. One by one, limp and blue in the face, they were rushed too late to hospital emergency rooms.

Some coroners suspected it was heart failure or crib death, now known as sudden infant death syndrome. Autopsies seemed inconclusive. But other medical examiners and detectives suspected, sometimes privately, that it was something far more sinister.

After a Life magazine story in 1963, Marie Noe — a Philadelphia housewife and part-time factory worker — became for a time perhaps the most famous bereaved mother in America.

On Wednesday, murder charges were brought against Mrs. Noe, now 70. She was accused of suffocating eight of her 10 children, beginning half a century ago.

Her other two infants died of natural causes, authorities said.

"For years, it was treated as unexplained," said Philadelphia's district attorney, Lynne Abraham, who announced the indictment for first-degree murder.

"What really is telling," she said, is that "our refusal or our unwillingness to believe moms kill their children may have played a role in this. We really don't want to believe moms can kill their kids."

Mrs. Noe has given a statement, the district attorney said. "She admitted she smothered four of the eight. The other four, she said she either didn't remember how the children died, or the specifics of how they died."

David Rudenstein, a lawyer for Mrs. Noe, said she had denied the charges.

Police said Mrs. Noe's husband, Arthur, a machinist who also held low-level political jobs, was not at home at the time of any of the deaths. He was not charged.

A Homeless Man's Odyssey / 'The New Jack London'

From Sleeping in a Train Station to Writing About It

By Barbara Stewart
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — "I slept there," Lee Stringer said recently, gesturing toward the space beneath a stairwell on Track 109 at Grand Central Terminal. "And down there." Lying flat on his stomach and leaning over the edge, he peered down. His head nearly grazed the wheels of an idled railroad passenger car. "Inside," he said, "where the electrical wires are, and the ventilation ducts and the water pipes."

It was in there, a decade ago, that Mr. Stringer began his journey from homelessness and crack addiction to unlikely literary success.

Bored and out of crack, he pulled out a stick he used for scraping resin from his pipe and inspected it for traces of the drug. He realized something: the tool was actually a pencil. "I mean, it's got lead in it and all," he later wrote. "And you can write with the thing."

Pulling out an old composition book, he gave it a try. "I'm scribbling like a maniac, heart pumping, adrenaline rushing, hands trembling," he wrote. And reading the story over, he realized something else: "I may be a crackhead, but I can write."

Today, Mr. Stringer is the well-reviewed author of "Grand Central Winter," a memoir of those years of homelessness. Which is how this former crackhead came to be guiding a reporter through what is left of an underworld in the newly spiffed-up Grand Central. Striding as jauntily as an alumnus touring his old college campus, he pointed out his hideaways and reminisced about his former life and how his writing had rescued him from it.

Since his book's publication last month by Seven Stories Press, there has been lavish praise from reviewers and from the likes of Kurt Vonnegut, who declared Mr. Stringer "the new Jack London" after reading Mr. Stringer's "The New Jack London" after reading the manuscript. In the foreword that he ultimately wrote, Mr. Vonnegut described Mr. Stringer as "a self-educated storyteller of the first rank."

There have been weeks spent promoting the memoir on television and radio on both coasts.

"Grand Central Winter" is the 48-year-old Mr. Stringer's chronicle of his 10 years spent migrating from street to park to terminal — the makeshift beds, the can collecting and crack smoking, the weeks in a prisonlike city shelter, and the encounters with police, with other addicts and with Gerald Rivera for a televised interview with the homeless.

By his own account, at least, he was a fairly successful strategist of homelessness.

"I had tons of blankets and old clothes and candles," he recalled over lunch in Grand Central's Oyster Bar, adjacent to, but a world away from, his old life. There were also piles of paperbacks left by commuters.

Lee Stringer stretching out on a bench in Grand Central Terminal, his former home. "I may be a crackhead, but I can write," he thought — and he proved it.

"Mostly Clancy and Grisham, popular stuff," he said, "but I found Ibsen and Tennessee Williams, too."

EACH DAY, he would collect cans, part of a routine as predictable as any commuter's. "I'd go up and down the empty cars, collecting," he said. "I'd make somewhere between 40 and 70 bucks a day." He would then cart the cans to a grocery store.

The cash bought a day's supply of crack, which he smoked piece by piece while prowling the streets.

By early morning, when the crack and the high were gone, he would return to Grand Central, jump down on the tracks and squeeze through the metal door into his cubbyhole to sleep until afternoon. "Then up again," he said cheerily, "in pursuit of a buzz."

Despite the squalor, Mr. Stringer writes of himself and his experiences with a bit of distance, a sardonic edge, as if he had lived this way in order to write about it. His writing is edgy and pointed and sometimes startlingly funny.

He became homeless in 1985, after a year in which his younger brother died — probably of AIDS, he said. A drinking buddy offered him a rock of crack cocaine to smoke. This, he wrote, is what he felt: "Success, love, orgasm, omnipotence, immortality and winning the lottery all at once."

But after a couple of minutes, he said, he crashed. "It's like death," he said. After months of chasing the high, he lost his job designing logos and writing advertising copy for a small marketing company, quit paying rent on his Upper East Side studio and was evicted. Unexpectedly, he felt liberated.

"I'm on the street," he wrote in his memoir, "clutching a voucher for all that remains of my worldly possessions. Only instead of feeling put out, I feel strangely relieved. Elated even. I have just been released. I realize, from all earthly claims upon me. There is nothing, any more, that I am obliged to do. No one, any more, I am required to be."

But, he says, he was always confused about who he was. Growing up in Mamaroneck, New York, just north of New York City, he says, he felt out of place: poor, on welfare and black in overwhelmingly white, well-to-do Westchester County.

Although obviously bright, he was an erratic student and could not afford college. After taking a course in camera operating at a trade school, he was hired, and rapidly fired, partly because of the market, and partly because of his temper, from television stations in Detroit and Dallas. In New York, he found work writing copy and doing graphic design.

But he was not yet ready to write anything substantial, from the heart, he said. "It's corny, but I didn't have a writer's soul back then," he said. "I was disconnected from myself for years and from other people. I was in search of something to write about."

HOMELINESS and addiction gave him that. "He found his subject," said Daniel Simon, his publisher. "Drab and miserable as it was, for him it was fortunate."

What he needed was a forum, which he found in The Street News, the weekly tabloid created in the early 1980s. While it was intended to be a voice for homeless people and causes, its main purpose was as a source of income for homeless people, who sold it on the street and in subways. Mr. Stringer's writing began appearing frequently in The Street News, and eventually he was writing most of its copy.

His chance for redemption came in 1994, when a subway train carrying his future publisher stalled. Stuck between stops, Mr. Simon of Seven Stories Press read a copy of The Street News cover to cover. After he got outside, he called Janet Allon, who was the paper's editor at the time, and praised Mr. Stringer's writing.

Almost immediately, Mr. Stringer called back to ask for a book contract.

"I was thinking, 'Money for crack,'" Mr. Stringer said. "And there was a lot of ego."

Mr. Simon agreed without hesitation. "Lee," he said, "is a real writer. I knew he would have some difficulty completing it. But I didn't know how much difficulty."

After spending a $3,000 advance on crack, Mr. Stringer realized that he could not write seriously while taking drugs. "I didn't want to do this any more," he said. "But I didn't know how not to do it."

He entered a drug treatment program, which took him 18 months to complete. After that, he was able to get on with his writing.

"Writing was mine," he said. "It was the first thing I could do on my own. It gave me back my humanity."

Toll Mounts In China as Dike Plan Is Weighed

The Associated Press

BEIJING — The government of China said Thursday that it was considering the last-ditch step of breaking open dikes along the raging Yangtze River to protect areas downstream, as the death toll from summer floods passed 2,000.

The decision on whether to safeguard some areas by inundating others could come Friday, when a flood tide surging down the river approaches a major embankment already weakened by weeks of floods and rain, officials said.

While officials said they believed that such a step would prove unnecessary, the fact that they were considering it was an indication of the pressures wrought by the heaviest flooding along the Yangtze since 1954, when more than 30,000 people died.

The death toll this summer, announced at a government news conference Thursday, was 700 higher than previous figures. The floods have affected 240 million people, or one-fifth of the population, to varying degrees, said Fan Baojun, deputy minister of civil affairs.

About 90 percent of the victims died in mountain floods and landslides that swallowed houses and villages, he said. Nearly 14 million people have been evacuated, and 5.5 million houses have been destroyed, with another 12 million houses damaged, he said.

Main embankments that hem in the Yangtze, the world's third-longest river, so far have held firm, protecting millions of people and rich farmland from its waters.

But a flood peak, the fourth to barrel down the river this year, was expected to reach the weakened Jingjiang dike in Hubei province, central China, within two days, raising the question of whether to flood an area south of the dike to protect the levee itself and other areas downstream. Water levels near the dike were at a record high, state-run media reported.

On Wednesday, two days after the end of the period covered by the latest death toll, a levee that protected 35,000 people near Jiangling city, along the Yangtze in southeast China, gave way, but officials said Thursday that there were no reports of casualties.

206 Lost in South Korea

Torrential rains pounded South Korea, raising to 206 the number of people killed or missing from landslides and floods, officials said Thursday, Reuters reported from Seoul.

More than 12,000 people were left homeless and some 111 buildings and 44 roads were destroyed or damaged, the national disaster headquarters said. Full damage estimates were not yet available.

At least 74 people were dead and 36 missing after the deluge Wednesday night and Thursday, the agency said. This added to the misery over the weekend, when floods and mudslides left 64 people dead and 32 missing.

"It's of historic proportions. This is the first time so many people were killed and lost in such a short period of time," an official with the disaster agency said.

Most northern outlying areas of Seoul and some parts of the city were cut off from utilities and communications, he said.

Woodland Fires Cause Emergency in Greece

The Associated Press

ATHENS — A state of emergency was declared Thursday in the greater Athens area and in a southern prefecture as wind-whipped brushfires killed at least one person and threatened the ancient site of the Olympics.

Firefighting aircraft and personnel arrived from Italy and France to help battle blazes that engulfed homes across Greece and stretched the country's firefighting forces to the limit.

Officials declared a state of emergency in the southern Greek prefecture of Itea, in the Peloponnese, where a brushfire came within a kilometer of Ancient Olympia.

On Mount Pendeli, near Athens, a man was found burned to death inside his home.

A state of emergency was called for all of Attica, the province that includes Athens and the main port, Piraeus. More than half of Greece's 11 million people live in Attica.

"We have some control of the fire," said Panagiotis Fourlas, the regional fire chief. "But we can't say we have it under full control yet because of this wind. We're very worried about some of the fires rekindling."

Electricity pylons and power lines were also damaged, leading to frequent power outages in the capital.

Residents of a wooded suburb north of Athens fighting a fire Thursday.

TRAVEL UPDATE

Aeromexico Plans to Double Fleet

MEXICO CITY — Aeromexico will spend about $700 million over the next five years to double its fleet. The Mexican flag-carrier plans to have 120 planes by 2002.

The airline currently operates 310 flights a day, 270 of which are domestic. The remaining 40 cover the United States, Europe and Latin America. (AP)

Delta to Add Flights on East Coast

NEW YORK — Delta Air Lines Inc. announced plans Thursday to add flights between its Atlanta hub and the largest business markets along the East Coast, including New York and Washington. A new flight to Chicago is also planned.

The nation's third-largest airline said the flights would begin in the autumn and include new hourly service to Boston and to Newark, New Jersey. (Reuters)

American Airlines is implementing a computer program that will let a select group of customers give spoken instructions during calls to the airline, eliminating the need for them to issue commands with Touch-Tone telephone numbers. (AP)

WEATHER

Forecast for Saturday through Monday, as provided by AccuWeather.

North America: Mostly sunny, dry and very warm in the Northeast with some sunshine from the Southwest. Thunderstorms Monday. Showers and some thunderstorms with heavy showers Sunday night through Monday. Sunny and hot in the West. Sunny and hot in the Southeast with some rain in the South. (AP)

City	Today	High	Low	Today	High	Low	Today	High	Low
Albuquerque	65/81	65	81	65/81	65	81	65/81	65	81
Anchorage	50/60	50	60	50/60	50	60	50/60	50	60
Atlanta	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85
Boston	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Chicago	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Dallas	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85
Denver	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Detroit	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Houston	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85
Los Angeles	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85
Miami	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85
Minneapolis	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Montreal	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
New York	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Oakland	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Phoenix	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85
Portland	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
San Francisco	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Seattle	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
St. Louis	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Tampa	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85	75/85	75	85
Washington	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Wichita	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Yonkers	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75

Legend: s=sunny, p=partly cloudy, o=cloudy, sh=showers, t=thunderstorms, r=rain, dr=drizzle, f=fog, m=mist, w=wind.

City	Today	High	Low	Today	High	Low	Today	High	Low
Algeria	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Amman	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Bangkok	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Beijing	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Bombay	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Buenos Aires	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Calcutta	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Cairo	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Chongqing	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Columbo	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Dhaka	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Hankow	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Hong Kong	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Kobe	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
London	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Lyons	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Manila	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Medan	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Moscow	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Mumbai	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Nairobi	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Paris	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Rangoon	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Reykjavik	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Rio de Janeiro	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Singapore	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Sourabaya	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Taipei	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Tokyo	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75
Yokohama	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75	65/75	65	75

'King Arthur's Stone' Is Dug Up at a British Castle

Agence France-Presse

TINTAGEL, England — A stone bearing a Latin inscription referring to the semilegendary British leader King Arthur has been found at the ancient ruined castle where he is supposed to have been born.

The piece of slate, 14 inches (35 centimeters) by 10 inches, was found at Tintagel Castle, on the northern coast of Cornwall in the southwest of England, during the final stages of a 60-year archaeological dig.

A spokesman for the preservation trust English Heritage, which was conducting the dig, said "Arthur's stone" was found in a drain. He added that the discovery at the former Roman fortress was "the find of a lifetime."

Arthur is said to have ruled the west of what is now England after the departure of the Romans sometime in the sixth century.

Stories from the eighth century relate how Arthur formed a council of his knights at a round table and how he was betrayed by his wife and one of his knights, Lancelot. The idea that he was born at Tintagel first emerged in the stories of an anonymous 12th-century writer, the English Heritage spokesman said.

The excavations have shown that after the Romans left there was some sort of royal headquarters at Tintagel, and the proposition that this was Arthur's birthplace will be strengthened by the discovery of the slate.

Opinion on whether Arthur really existed is still divided, although scholars generally accept the existence of a chieftain of mixed Roman and British parentage who led the forces of British kings against Saxon invaders.

DO YOU LIVE IN BELGIUM, DENMARK, FRANCE, IRELAND, THE NETHERLANDS OR U.K.?

For information about subscribing, call toll free:

00800 4 448 7827
(00800 4 IHT SUBS)

Herald Tribune

THE WORLD'S DAILY NEWSPAPER

This way to

THE INTERMARKET

Don't miss it. A lot happens there.

A two-month trial subscription.
Save up to 60%

Try a special, low cost 2-month trial subscription to the International Herald Tribune to enjoy delivery to your home or office every morning AND save up to 60% off the newsstand price.

COUNTRY/CURRENCY	3 MONTHS NEWSSTAND PRICE	2 MONTHS OFFER PRICE	SAVING COVER PRICE
AUSTRIA	1.45	1.30	10%
BELGIUM/LUXEM.	3.50	3.00	14%
DENMARK	7.80	6.50	17%
FINLAND	6.50	5.50	15%
FRANCE	5.20	4.50	13%
GERMANY	1.80	1.50	17%
GREAT BRITAIN	1.80	1.50	17%
HONG KONG	7.20	6.00	17%
INDIA	1.80	1.50	17%
ITALY	145.000	120.000	17%
JAPAN	25.000	20.000	20%
NETHERLANDS	1.80	1.50	17%

THE AMERICAS

Lewinsky Slowly Sheds Her Surreal Seclusion

Start of Testimony Is Step Toward Freedom

By Peter Baker
Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — She likes antiques, but what Monica Lewinsky wanted for her 25th birthday was not so simple. "My freedom," she told friends and relatives. "My life back." So she got a special treat as she celebrated two weeks ago: A pair of old friends secretly visited her at her father's Brentwood, California, home.

For the central figure in a presidential scandal, it was a rare gift. Over the last six months, she could not so much as call up a girlfriend for fear that her phone might be tapped or the friend subpoenaed. Once when she tried, a former schoolmate soon found herself talking with the grand jury.

Thursday marked the beginning of the end of her life of surreal seclusion.

Exactly 202 days after investigators confronted her at the Ritz-Carlton at Pentagon City in Northern Virginia, Monica Samille Lewinsky's day in court arrived, her chance to say under oath what level of intimacy she had with President Bill Clinton and whether or not he in any way sought to thwart the legal process in the Paula Jones sexual harassment lawsuit.

Ms. Lewinsky's appearance before the grand jury called by the Whitewater independent counsel, Kenneth Starr, came after a half-year odyssey that made her the nation's most famous former intern and exposed virtually every corner of her life to public examination. From her purported sexual habits to her troubled family history to her youthful indiscretions, it has been a journey that some might say was of her own making, but one that she certainly never fully anticipated.

She has been called a tart, a bimbo, a stalker, a femme fatale. Her first lawyer told anyone who would listen that she was immature and would "tend to embellish." Some people who once were her friends have gone public disclosing her confidences.

While much of her daily life during the investigation has been shrouded from the public, six months of interviews with people close to her provide a glimpse of her current reality.

Holed up in her Watergate apartment for days at a time, Ms. Lewinsky has read scores of newspapers and watched hours of television as people who have never met her speculated endlessly on talk shows and in the daily press about who she is and what she did. The urge to fight back had to be suppressed, although the anger at the friend who turned her in to Mr. Starr, Linda Tripp, has only grown.

Friends were paraded through the grand jury. Her mother broke off her own testimony in February, saying she was too distraught to continue. Investigators scoured her phone bills, rummaged through her closets, read her letters and e-mail, obtained her bookstore purchases and searched her computer.

What Ms. Lewinsky kept from them, until recent days, was the navy blue dress now being tested by the FBI for semen stains. The dress was brought to New York late last year by Ms. Lewinsky as she was job hunting and was left — never unpacked — in the Manhattan apartment of her mother, Marcia Lewis.

Ms. Lewinsky finally turned it over last week as part of a deal that provided full protection from prosecution for not only herself but also Ms. Lewis and her father, Bernard Lewinsky.

Since the day her name first became public in January, Ms. Lewinsky has lived an odd double life, according to people close to her — at once exceedingly public yet also achingly lonely.

She smiled for the cameras that followed her everywhere. She posed for Vanity Fair magazine, a session arranged by her then-lawyer, William Ginsburg, to free her imprisoned "libido," as he put it.

But that belied the depressing isolation imposed on her by her new legal team of Washington veterans, Plato Cacheris and Jacob Stein, who have instructed her not to talk with virtually everyone other than lawyers and relatives.

She was advised not to use the gymnasium at the Watergate because people might take photos and sell them to tabloids. While she escapes at times in a blond wig, sunglasses and baseball cap, she leaves it to friends and surrogates to buy her groceries or personal items.

While her lawyers were negotiating to save her from possible perjury or obstruction of justice charges, Ms. Lewinsky took up knitting scarves, with help from her father's wife, Barbara.

She was not able to attend her mother's secret wedding in New York last spring because the family feared that she would be spotted and media cameras would crash the small, private affair.

Her parents are reported to be handling her six-figure legal bills.

Ms. Lewinsky has escaped several times to her father's place near Los Angeles, where media coverage has been less intense. Traveling, though, is still an adventure. In addition to the disguises, Ms. Lewinsky's camp usually consults with airline special service officials, makes reservations under false names and then switches them just before boarding to comply with federal regulations.

After her meeting with prosecutors in New York last week that led to her immunity deal, she and the family spokeswoman, Judy Smith, drove all night to Washington to sign it because the airports and train stations were reported to be stalked out by camera crews.

Settlers in an encampment in Brazil, called Agroisa, which was taken over by Sem Terra three weeks ago.

Bringing Hope to Brazil's Landless

Using the Constitution, Movement Helps the Poor Found Settlements

By Anthony Faiola
Washington Post Service

NOSSA SENHORA DA CONCEIÇÃO ENCAMPMENT, Brazil — Rose Marie da Silva recalls being cold, hungry and desperate the morning that she and 200 others invaded this once-thriving ranch on the São Francisco River. It was before the land's legal owner discovered the squatters' makeshift tents and by then they were firmly dug in. Now, months later, their settlement has a name — and, they hope, a sense of permanence.

"Nothing will get me off this land now," said Mrs. da Silva, 34, who added that for the first time in her life she feels like a landowner.

The land invasion here in the poverty-stricken northern region called the Sertão, which took place last summer, was orchestrated by one of the most active and controversial forces in Brazil's political life: the Landless Movement, known in Portuguese as the Sem Terra.

Some consider the Sem Terra a group of dangerous insurgents because of the passions they have ignited in Brazil's estimated 2 million landless families, many of whom are returning to the countryside after trying unsuccessfully to carve out lives for themselves in the mega-cities of São Paulo, Rio de Janeiro or Recife.

The movement's growing numbers are prompting headlines across Latin America as they organize marches on the capital, invade land held by the wealthy, hijack food trucks and stage takeovers of banks and government offices in their own brand of economic vigilantism.

"We agree that there must be land reform, but the Sem Terra have a complete lack of respect for the law," said Luiz Hasers, president of the Brazilian Rural Society of Landowners. "Their path of reform is the path of chaos and madness."

Yet, there is method in their "madness." To justify its actions, the Sem Terra, which grew out of radical elements of the Roman Catholic Church in the 1980s, use Brazil's updated constitution, which mandates that unproductive land can and should be taken over by those willing to cultivate it.

Although its members sometimes have been accused of invading productive property, the Sem Terra mostly target land that the rich have abandoned. In the 1990s alone, the group has staged more than 518 invasions, settling 151,427 families on 53 million acres (21.4 million hectares). Many Brazilians regard the squatters as heroes, modern-day Robin Hoods in a nation where 4 percent of the people own 50 percent of the arable land.

At more than 600,000 members, the Sem Terra is one of the most powerful grass-roots political movements in Latin America and has become an international cause célèbre, attracting dona-

"I fought for this land, and look, I have my dream — a house and a little piece of land that is mine," says Jose Ferreira de Lima, 47, a Sem Terra farmer in Safra. "I am the owner of myself now."

tions from Europe, North America and beyond. And despite its propaganda, which runs to Che Guevara posters and emblems reminiscent of old Soviet farm collectives, its ideology is closer to capitalism than communism. Invading families work for ownership of land, not as members of a commune.

At the national level, the movement's university-educated leaders have turned the Sem Terra into a fashionable brand name, winning the hearts of millions, and earning substantial profits, with Sem Terra teas, gourmet coffees, T-shirts and souvenirs.

"We are trying to right the wrongs of Brazil's past," said Neuri Rosseto, a Sem Terra national director. "We are redistributing wealth because the government won't."

Their latest battleground is here in the Sertão, a poverty-stricken region that is experiencing one of the hemisphere's most severe food shortages. Unlike most of this lush, tropical country, the Sertão is harsh and dry. Its soil is almost like desert sand, yielding its nutrients only with man-made irrigation systems that the poor residents, descendants of African slaves, American Indians and Portuguese laborers, cannot afford.

The region suffers drought seven months a year, and subsistence farmers live off the sprinkles that follow. But the weather phenomenon known as El Niño has prolonged the drought for 18 months, with no end predicted until December.

Coupled with a shortage of state-government food baskets, often handed out to peasants in exchange for votes, the situation has become desperate.

For that reason, Mrs. da Silva was an eager listener when the Sem Terra came to her desert town on a recruiting mission last year. Although off-duty police hired by land barons in the Sertão have killed several Sem Terra members since last year, Mrs. da Silva, like thousands of others, was willing to take a chance for what she termed dignity.

"We still don't have food every day, but we do have one thing," said Mrs. da Silva, her face serious in the scorching midday heat, as her children clung to her red cloth skirt. "We have hope. That's something I've never had since the day I was born."

Mrs. da Silva grew up without a home, sleeping under the stars with her parents, descendants of former slaves, who labored in the fields of a land baron in Pernambuco state. "I suffered during my childhood," said Mrs. da Silva, who is 34 but looks to be in her late 40s, about the average life expectancy for people here.

Life at Nossa Senhora da Conceição is not easy. The cluster of 71 families is suffering through one of the hardest stages of the Sem Terra settlement process. As lawyers fight to get them legally recognized, a process that can take up to three years, they live in a fetid village of open sewers and mud huts. They regularly are threatened by security guards working for the landowner.

More advanced camps of the Sem Terra have evolved into thriving communities, with their own schools, well-stocked medical clinics, irrigation systems and crops grossing millions of dollars annually.

In Safra, a Sem Terra settlement only 20 miles (32 kilometers) away that was established in August 1995, the government has recognized residents as new landowners. They now have cement houses, tiny markets, irrigation systems and schools for their children.

"I never learned to write my name, but now my children are in school — and one of them wants to be a journalist," said Jose Ferreira de Lima, 47, a Sem Terra farmer in Safra. "I tell him, 'Fight for it.' I fought for this land, and look, I have my dream — a house and a little piece of land that is mine. I am the owner of myself now."

POLITICAL NOTES

House Blocks Ban On Gays Directive

WASHINGTON — The House has soundly rejected a measure that would have blocked President Bill Clinton's directive banning job discrimination against federal workers who are gay.

In an emotional, heartfelt debate that prompted some conservatives to side with liberals, the House voted, 252-176, on Wednesday to cast aside the amendment, rejecting arguments that Mr. Clinton's measure would lead to affirmative action for homosexuals. The vote also revealed a degree of discomfort among some Republicans toward the party's recent radical salvo against homosexuality.

"If a person does an honest day's work for an honest day's pay, that's all I can ask," said Representative Tom Bliley, Republican of Virginia, who added that he "unequivocally opposes" discrimination.

The amendment, sponsored by Representative Joel Hefley, Republican of Colorado, was attached to a spending bill and would have undone a May 28 executive order by Mr. Clinton that adds homosexuals to the groups that may not be discriminated against in federal employment. The order sought to make uniform a federal employment policy that is already in effect at many agencies. (NYT)

Oil-Lease Plan

WASHINGTON — Seeking a balance between oil development and the environment, the Clinton administration announced Thursday it would open nearly 4 million acres of a federal reserve on Alaska's North Slope to oil development.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt said that a portion of the most ecologically sensitive part of the reserve would be off limits to drilling, including a strip of coastal marshland that environmentalists consider critical for millions of migratory birds and other wild life.

"This is a good plan based on sound science," Mr. Babbitt said. "We have barred or limited oil and gas development in key environmentally sensitive areas."

He added: "At the same time, we will be allowing oil and gas development on almost 4 million acres."

Several oil companies, including Arco Alaska and British Petroleum, have expressed interest in drilling in the government reserve just west of the Prudhoe Bay oil fields.

Development of the reserve in far northern Alaska has been controversial for years. Conservationists fear that oil production will harm wetlands, lagoons and marshes that dot the reserve's coastal plain and each summer attract the migratory birds as well as caribou and polar bears.

But oil executives contend that the fields can be developed while at the same time protecting life and habitat. They also argue that unlike the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge farther to the east, the National Petroleum Reserve was set aside specifically for development 75 years ago. (AP)

Quote/Unquote

Andrew Kohut, director of the Pew Research Center for the People and the Press, speaking Thursday about the U.S. public's perception of Monica Lewinsky: "She's not well liked and she's not much believed. But when we ask who do you believe more, the president or Monica Lewinsky, it's a puzzler for most Americans." (AP)

AMERICAN TOPICS

The West's New Land Ethic

Outside dry, dusty Douglas, Arizona, Matt Magoffin, a cattle rancher, has been trucking water to half a dozen custom-built ponds and tanks on his 17,000-acre (6,800-hectare) ranch, a four-year-old effort to save a disappearing amphibian known as the Chinlefin leopard frog.

A neighbor, Bill McDonald, works with herpetologists in the hills above his ranch to see if ridge-nosed rattlesnakes, an endangered species, are surviving fires set deliberately to regenerate desert grass. To the north, another rancher, Will Holder, does nothing to prevent a mountain lion from killing his calves. Instead, he markets the survivors as "predator-friendly" beef.

It is all, reports the Los Angeles Times, part of a new land ethic taking root in parts of the West, a mixture of altruism and self-preservation practiced by a small but influential group of "eco-ranchers."

Armed with science and foundation money, they hope to showcase a form of ranching that is both economically viable and environmentally desirable.

A ranchers group that includes Mr. McDonald and Mr. Magoffin has raised close to $1 million to help protect rare frogs, snakes, birds and mammals.

Short Takes

After two decades of decline or stagnation, Catholic school enrollment is rising slowly. Nationwide, it is up 3 percent since 1992, to 2.65 million students, and more than 150 Roman Catholic schools have been built in the past 12 years. That compares with a loss of 3 million students and the closure of 4,200 schools from 1965 to the mid-1980s, according to the Washington-based National Catholic Educational Association. Educators attribute the renewal in part to growing discontent with public schools. The trend also is said to reflect a growing desire by parents to raise children in an unapologetically moral environment.

At the turn of the century, W.E.B. Du Bois, the black intellectual and civil rights pioneer, proposed an ambitious project: the creation of an Encyclopedia Africana, a comprehensive history of Africa and people of African descent that he hoped would help defeat racism by cataloging blacks' contributions to civilization. Nearly 90 years later, Mr. Du Bois's dream is about to become a reality.

In February, Microsoft and a team of scholars working under the Harvard professors Henry Louis Gates Jr. and K. Anthony Appiah will release a CD-ROM titled Microsoft Encarta Africana. Later in the year, a print version containing 3,000 articles will be published by Perseus Books. "There's never been anything like this before," Mr. Gates said.

Brian Knowlton

Away From Politics

• A day-old baby who was born in Milwaukee with her heart outside her body survived a five-hour operation to place the organ in its rightful place. Dr. Bert Litwin, who led four surgeons, was cautiously optimistic about the future of Jazmya Hope Stumpf, who was in critical condition. (AP)

• A hermit crab called Crabopatra won the Cucumber Rind Cup — plus the right to crawl down a flower-bedecked runway as more than 100 people sang "Here it comes, Miss Crustacean" in the annual Miss Crustacean pageant in Ocean City, New Jersey. The 39 entries also featured Leonardo DiCaprio and Tara Crabinski, which scurried on tiny paper skates in a shoe box decorated with aluminum foil to look like an ice rink. (AP)

• The 13 machinists and assembly technicians in Westerville, Ohio, who they share the winning $161.5 million Powerball lottery ticket have not quit their jobs and do not plan to soon — at least until someone can replace them. They have not even claimed their prize yet. The winners have 180 days from the July 29 drawing to present their ticket for validation. (AP)

• Orlando, Florida, tops the list of metropolitan areas most deadly to pedestrians, according to a study. Two other Florida city areas followed Orlando as the most dangerous for pedestrians: Tampa-St. Petersburg and Miami-Fort Lauderdale. The Los Angeles-Anaheim-Riverside region, because of its sheer size, had the largest number of pedestrian deaths and injuries, with 992 in 1996. (AP)

WWW. PRIME SITES WWW.

List your website and e-mail address in our new "Prime Sites" section every Thursday.

For Rates and Deadlines, contact:

Europe:

Sarah Wershof

Tel.: (44-171) 420 0326

Fax: (44-171) 420 0338

North America:

Sandy O'Hara

Tel.: (1-212) 752 3890 or 800 572 7212

Fax: (1-212) 755 8785

e-mail: The_INTERMARKET@iht.com

THE WORLD'S DAILY NEWSPAPER

Is Pregnancy Dishonorable?

2 Students Who Are Mothers Sue Over Honor Society Exclusion

New York Times Service

COVINGTON, Kentucky — Two 17-year-old high school students who say they were denied membership in the National Honor Society because they were pregnant are planning to sue their school board in federal court here on grounds of sexual discrimination.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which is to file suit for the girls Thursday, says it sees the case as a way to seek wider enforcement of federal laws banning discrimination against pregnant high school students.

The two girls, Soner Chipman and Chastity Glass, both 17 and top students at Grant County High School in Williamstown, Kentucky, are caring for their daughters. They will soon be entering their last year at the school.

Ms. Chipman, whose 2-month-old daughter's name is Cheyenne, plans to marry the father, a 21-year-old worker at a shop that changes the oil in people's cars, on Friday.

Ms. Glass and her 15-month-old daughter, Shelby, live with Ms. Glass's mother. The baby's father, who just graduated, helps with child care and plans to join the National Guard.

Both girls, like many residents in their community, a rural, tobacco-growing area where alcohol sales are banned, say that premarital sex is wrong but that abortion would be a far greater sin.

Ms. Glass's lawyer, Sara Mandelbaum of the American Civil Liberties Union, described the case this way: "It's making a girl wear a scarlet P and bear the burden for something that is a joint activity. No boy is being left out of the society for having engaged in premarital sex."

Both girls have been exemplary students, earning top marks in such courses as "advanced placement" English and chemistry, and have won local and state awards. Ms. Chipman and Ms. Glass say membership in the National Honor Society has been a lifelong goal.

ASIA/PACIFIC

Japan Marks Atomic Attack And Deplores Asian Testing

HIROSHIMA, Japan — Thousands of people gathered Thursday in sweltering weather to commemorate the 53d anniversary of the world's first use of an atomic bomb and also to urge India and Pakistan to halt their nuclear weapons programs.

Many in the crowd of 50,000 clasped their hands in prayer or held Buddhist rosaries as silence was observed at 8:15 A.M. — the time of the day the U.S. atomic bomb detonated and took the lives of 140,000 people, many of whom died over time from burns and radiation.

Three days later, another atomic bomb destroyed the city of Nagasaki, killing 70,000.

In the presence of the Indian and Pakistani ambassadors, Prime Minister Keizo Obuchi of Japan condemned the two South Asian countries' series of nuclear tests in May, which cast a pall over international efforts to curb the spread of nuclear arms.

"It is very regrettable that both India and Pakistan carried out nuclear tests in May," said Mr. Obuchi, who took office in June.

The mayor of Hiroshima, Takashi Hiraoka, used stronger language in telling the crowd that those tests had raised tensions in South Asia and shaken the foundation of the world's nuclear nonproliferation movement.

"The people in Hiroshima feel a strong rage against the nuclear tests by the two nations and worry about inducing a chain reaction of nuclear competition," he said.

In major Indian cities, scientists, writers, painters, students and workers demonstrated, warning that a devastation similar to Hiroshima's could happen in their region.

"Both India and Pakistan now have the capability to perpetrate the horrors of Hiroshima and Nagasaki on each other, not once but many times," said a resolution by activists in New Delhi.

"The people of India and Pakistan must stop this madness which threatens us with mutual annihilation," the resolution said.

Japanese praying Thursday in Hiroshima as commemorative lanterns float down the Motoyasu River.

East Timor Talks Tied To Fate of Jailed Leader

Laureate Asks Indonesia to Release Him

CANBERRA — An East Timorese independence leader, Jose Ramos Horta, ruled out Thursday further talks on the future of the disputed region until a jailed resistance leader, Xanana Gusmao, is freed by Indonesia.

Mr. Horta, a Nobel Peace Prize laureate, welcomed an agreement reached Wednesday at the United Nations in New York between Portugal and Indonesia to open talks on autonomy for the former Portuguese colony. It was annexed by Indonesia after a 1975 invasion.

Australia is the only country that recognizes Indonesian sovereignty over East Timor.

Mr. Horta said he would take no part in negotiations until Mr. Xanana was released.

"They cannot pretend they are serious, that they want to solve the problem of East Timor and then do not wish to release Xanana Gusmao," Mr. Horta told Australian Broadcasting Corp. radio.

"Xanana is the only political leader with real acceptance and credibility among the people of East Timor," he added. "Any decision without his involvement, his imprimatur — it will be rejected by the people of East Timor."

Australia's foreign minister, Alexander Downer, refused to support Mr. Horta's call and said that demands for a referendum on independence were irresponsible and could lead to further bloodshed in the territory.

Mr. Downer welcomed the talks, but said Thursday that he would not intervene to back Mr. Xanana's release.

"I'm not getting into trying to micromanage this," he said.

"Horta is one important figure in all of this, there are a lot of other figures."

"We've been consulting over the last few weeks with a wide range of different leaders of what you might broadly describe as the East Timorese community, although a lot of them are overseas. There is a diversity of views."

Mr. Downer said he thought the most likely short-term option was wide-ranging autonomy. (AP, Reuters)

11 Mass Graves Reported

Eleven mass graves believed to hold the remains of about 500 people have been discovered in Indonesia's remote Aceh Province, a human rights group has said. The Associated Press reported from Jakarta.

Rufriadi, a lawyer with the Indonesian Legal Aid Foundation, said Wednesday that he and other activists were led to the graves during a visit last month to Indonesia's northernmost province, where a separatist rebellion has been going on since the late 1980s.

Villagers said the remains belong to people killed by Indonesian troops during the eight years the province has been under military rule. Mr. Rufriadi said in a phone interview. He said that some villagers reported they had been forced to dig the graves at gunpoint.

The Indonesian military has long been accused of arbitrary killing and torture in Aceh, a strongly Muslim province about 1,100 miles (1,780 kilometers) northwest of Jakarta.

There was no immediate comment from the military on the report of the mass graves.

BRIEFLY

Taliban Enemies Advance

KABUL — Fierce fighting has left about 100 fighters from the Taliban militia dead in northern Afghanistan, the opposition alliance said Thursday.

A spokesman, Abdullah, said alliance forces had recaptured territory from Taliban fighters near the alliance's key city of Mazar-i-Sharif and had taken control of the strategic town of Borka to the south.

A Taliban spokesman, Abdul Hay Muttayn, said he could not immediately confirm that the Islamic militia had lost ground in the fighting and had no information on casualties. (AP)

2 Held in Taiwanese's Death

BEIJING — Police in Haicbeog, a city in northeastern China, have arrested two suspects, identified as Huang Shidong and Zhang Shifeng, in connection with the July 27 kidnapping and murder of a Taiwan city councilor, a local Public Security Bureau official said Thursday.

The authorities said the suspects had kidnapped Lin Ti-chuan, 32, and her boyfriend along with two other men.

Citing a confession by Mr. Huang, the official Xinhua press agency reported that Li Guangzhi, a businessman still at large, had organized the abduction in an attempt to force the boyfriend, Wei Tien-kang, to repay a debt.

Things went wrong when Miss Lin began to suffer respiratory difficulties. She was taken to a hospital and where she died, Mr. Huang fled the scene. The boyfriend managed to escape unharmful.

"Police are now making all-out efforts to search for the other people who may be involved in the case," Xinhua said. (AFP)

Kashmir Border Falls Silent

SRINAGAR, India — Artillery fire ceased Thursday for the first time in a week along most of the disputed Kashmir border.

India reported artillery fire only in Kargil, in the mountainous Ladakh region 220 kilometers (140 miles) northeast of Srinagar, the Jammu and Kashmir state summer capital.

"Pakistan carried on mortar and artillery shelling in the Kargil sector in early hours," said an Indian major, P. Purnashottam. "So far, there have been no reports of any casualties." (Reuters)

For the Record

The citizens of Japan's ancient capital of Kyoto have rejected a plan to build a replica of the Pont-Neuf bridge in Paris. Mayor Yoriyane Masumoto said Thursday. French President Jacques Chirac had proposed the footbridge when he visited Japan in November 1996. (Reuters)

Nicholas Leeson's lawyer has appealed to Singaporean authorities to free the imprisoned securities trader on compassionate grounds following the discovery that he is suffering from colon cancer. Mr. Leeson, whose futures dealings brought down the British merchant bank Barings, has served about two and a half years of a six-and-a-half-year term. (AP)

THE INTERMARKET

GENERAL

See Saturday's Intermarket for Arts, Friendships, International Bidding, Politics, News, and a Dose of Toads. For more contact Sarah Wershtol on +44 171 420 0338 or fax +44 171 420 0338. A GREAT DEAL HAPPENS AT THE INTERMARKET

CHOOSE YOUR SCHOOL via The International Education Guide

For your free copy please write to: International Herald Tribune Imelda Mauve 181 avenue Charles de Gaulle 92521 Neuilly Cedex France

Announcements

Herald Tribune THE WORLD'S BEST NEWS SERVICE
SUBSCRIBER CUSTOMER SERVICE: For questions or queries about the delivery of your newspaper, the status of your subscription or about ordering a subscription, please call the following numbers:
EUROPE, MIDDLE EAST AND AFRICA: TOLL FREE - Australia 0650 6120 Belgium 0800 4 448 7827 Denmark 0800 4 448 7827 France 0800 4 448 7827 Germany 0130 945255 Great Britain 0800 4 448 7827 Greece 0800 33 12 15 06 Ireland 0800 4 448 7827 Israel (toll free) 03 521750 Italy 167 75034 Luxembourg 0800 2703 Austria 0800 4 448 7827 Norway 0800 4 448 7827 Sweden 0800 797039 Switzerland 0800 4 448 7827 Taiwan (toll free) 0120 484 027 Korea 3672 0244 Malaysia (toll free) 1-800-880102 Philippines 080 4848 Singapore 325 0835 Taiwan 775436 Thailand 277 4485
USA (toll free) 1-800-822-8884 Elsewhere (+1) 212 755-8880 ASIA: Hong Kong 2922 1171 Indonesia 800 1228 Japan (toll-free) 0120 484 027 Korea 3672 0244 Malaysia (toll free) 1-800-880102 Philippines 080 4848 Singapore 325 0835 Taiwan 775436 Thailand 277 4485 Elsewhere (+852) 28221171

Announcements

BARREME AS 24
All 7 AOUT 1998
Pro Hout TVA et devis locale (production disponible sur demande)
Remplace les barres antérieurs

FRANCE (zone C) on FFA - TVA 20.6%
GO: 3.53 FOD: 2.11
SCSP: 5.27 FOD: 5.09

UK (zone B) on A - TVA 17.5% (Real 5%)
GO: 0.5770 FOD: 0.3476

ALLEMAGNE (zone D) DM - TVA 16%
GO: 0.32 SCSP: 1.29
MAX: 1.01 SCSP: 1.37

BELGIQUE on FFA - TVA 21%
GO: 20.41 FOD: 0.96
SCSP: 32.15 SCSP: 30.17

HOLLANDE (zone NL) - TVA 17.5%
GO: 1.24 FOD: 0.732
SCSP: 1.906 SCSP: 1.695

LUXEMBOURG on LUFR - TVA 15%
GO: 17.74

ESPAGNE (zone A) on PTASA-TVA 16%
GO: 80.09 FOD: 0.732
SCSP: 103.10 SCSP: 107.99

* Usage réglementaire

Personals

THANK YOU SACRED HEART of Jesus and Saint Jude for prayers answered.
PGA

THANK YOU ST JUDE for so many prayers answered.
MW

Automobiles

BMW CONVERTIBLE, 1981, Automatic, 1600cc, 17,000 miles, white, cream leather, $13,000. Tel: 33096 03883475

Auto Rentals

RENT AUTO DERBY FRANCE: WEEKEND FF500 - 7 days. FF1500. Paris +33 (0) 43 48 55 55

Autos Tax Free

EUROPE AUTO BROKERS, INC
Tel: Holland 31 (0) 30 604 454 Fax: 030 604 454

Moving

ALLIED ARTHUR PIERRE
THE PROFESSIONAL MOVERS
For all your international moving needs
Paris +33 1 34 75 92 92
www.alliedfr.com

International Moving Company
Tel Paris: +33(0)1 48 13 01 02
Fax Paris: +33(0)1 48 13 07 08
Tel London: +44-181-965 8733
Fax London: +44-181-965 8249
Tel New York: 1 718 433 4005
Fax New York: 1 718 433 4009

HOMESHIP Worldwide Services
International shipping of personal effects, furniture & vehicles by AIR-SEA-ROAD Executive service
Call for free estimate
Tel: 33 (0) 1 48 55 21 81

Legal Services

DIVORCE 1-DAY CERTIFIED Call or Fax (095) 922-3615 300 S. Highland Ave. Ste. C #143 Brea, CA 92606 USA e-mail: divorce@spynet.com

DIVORCE IN 1 DAY. No travel. Write Box 377, Seabury, MA 01776 USA Tel: 978-443-4367 Fax: 978-443-4363

Employment

Domestic Positions Wanted
EXPERIENCED COUPLE available now. USA/Europe or elsewhere. Fax: 351.1.467732

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

The Original kallback
New Lower Rates!
Call The U.S. From:
France..... 27c
Italy..... 34c
Japan..... 32c
Singapore..... 33c
UK..... 17c

• NO Deposit
• NO Set Up Fees
• NO Minimums
• Instant Activation
• Fiber-Optic Networks
• Six-Second Billing
Tel: 1.206.599.1991
U.S.: 1.800.965.1626
Email: info@kallback.com
www.kallback.com
Agents Wanted

Business Services

ATELEJA MANAGEMENT LTD
(Oshiro Corporate & Trust)
Contact: Tony Gordon/Alan Apat
Tel/Fax: +44 1824 618007/618009
E-mail: ateleja@btinternet.com or Bernard Cantley, France
Tel/Fax: +33 2 95972391/95971704

Business Services

GENEVA SWITZERLAND
Full Service
is our business
• International law and taxes
• Mailbox, telephone, telefax and telex services
• Translation and secretarial services
• Immigration, consular and administrative of Swiss and foreign companies
• Furnished offices and conference rooms for daily or monthly rental
Full confidence and discretion assured.

BANCOR OF ASIA
Bankable guarantees to secure funding for viable projects
VENTURE CAPITAL
EQUITY LOANS
REAL ESTATE
Long term collateral
Supported Guarantees
Fax: (852) 610-8294
Tel: (852) 664-5363

BUSINESS ADVISORY SERVICES S.A.
7 Rue May, 1207 GENEVE
Tel: 739 05 40, Telex: 413222, Fax: 739 05 44
YOUR OFFICE IN LONDON
Bond Street - Mail, Phone, Fax, Telex
Tel: 44 171 230 8000 Fax: 171 489 7617

Escorts & Guides

BELGRAVIA ORCHIDS
LONDON - EUROPE
THE FINEST & THE MOST SINCERE
18+ 35+ INTERNATIONAL
BEAUTIFUL & ELEGANT SECRETARIES, AIR HOSTESSES &
YOUR COMPANION 24 HOURS
Escort Agency Credit Cards Welcome
TEL: LONDON +44 (0)
0171 589 5237

AtlantiC & Pacific

A Privileged Few enjoy our Platinum Membership
Your Dreams are Our Reality
Exclusive Portfolio Books to View Worldwide Offering the Ultimate Escort Service for Global Travellers info@atlantic-platinum.com
LONDON: 07 074 074 770
INT: +44 (0) 7000 77 04 11
Europe, Mediterranean, Middle East USA & Canada, Far East
A FIRST CLASS Escort Service - LONDON - HEATHROW - Tel: 0171 225 2247 (24hrs)
A YOUNG BRAZILIAN BEAUTY Friendly, Exclusive, Charming Companion London Escort Service 0811 379 869

Financial Services

FUNDING PROBLEMS?
for SOLUTIONS Contact
BANCOR OF ASIA
Bankable guarantees to secure funding for viable projects
VENTURE CAPITAL
EQUITY LOANS
REAL ESTATE
Long term collateral
Supported Guarantees
Fax: (852) 610-8294
Tel: (852) 664-5363

GENEVA SWITZERLAND
Full Service
is our business
• International law and taxes
• Mailbox, telephone, telefax and telex services
• Translation and secretarial services
• Immigration, consular and administrative of Swiss and foreign companies
• Furnished offices and conference rooms for daily or monthly rental
Full confidence and discretion assured.

BUSINESS ADVISORY SERVICES S.A.
7 Rue May, 1207 GENEVE
Tel: 739 05 40, Telex: 413222, Fax: 739 05 44
YOUR OFFICE IN LONDON
Bond Street - Mail, Phone, Fax, Telex
Tel: 44 171 230 8000 Fax: 171 489 7617

Financial Services

HIGH SOCIETY
The Most Prestigious Escort Agency
Executive Service Worldwide
Genuine Fashion, Glamour & Career
Sophisticated, Intelligent, Stunning Ladies
Established in Germany, Brussels, Paris, Rome, New York, USA View Our Fine Ladies in Model Gallery:
web@hivis.net
HQ London Tel: +44(0)7000 444676

Financial Services

VENUS IN FURS
24HR WORLDWIDE ESCORT SERVICE
LONDON 0171 362 7000
All cards. Advance bookings welcome

Financial Services

PARIS
service@vip-escorts.com
+33(0)1 42 21 12 12 / +33(0)1 42 21 12 12

ARISTOCATS Escort Service
Beautiful hot Paris Models
3 Chateaux St. London W1
London Tel: 0171 258 0380

HERBY HIGH SOCIETY VIENNA-PARIS
RIVERA ZURICH GERMANY
International Escort & Travel Service
Vienna +43(0)1 516 41 04 all credit cards

PARIS
Geneva Escort Service +41 79 8577894

CHELSEA Escort Service
51 Beauchamp Place, London SW1
Tel: 0171 584 6512

LENAS - LONDON ESCORT SERVICE
First Ladies for Discerning Gentlemen
Tel: 0171 584 2200 credit cards

ARISTOCATS - FRANKFURT - MAIN
"CHARLIE'S ESCORT AGENCY"
MOBILE PHONE 0177 1 59 99 99

Financial Services

PRIME COLLATERAL
INSTRUMENTS
Venture Capital Finance Available for Government Projects and Government Companies
Full service for sale
Large Projects on Specialty
Also, Long Term Finance for Large and Small Companies
No commission Unit Pledged REPRESENTATIVE
Needed to act as Liaison
Please reply in English

VENTURE CAPITAL CONSULTANTS
Investment bankers
15011 Ventura Blvd., Suite 300
Encino, California 91436 U.S.A.
Fax No: (818) 915-1094
Tel: (818) 789-0422
Holland: St. Assoc. Data O.G. Lelyveld

Business Opportunities
OFFSHORE COMPANIES. For free brochure or advice Tel: London 44 181 741 1224 Fax: 44 181 748 6558/6538 www.applianet.co.uk

Business Opportunities

VENUS IN FURS
24HR WORLDWIDE ESCORT SERVICE
LONDON 0171 362 7000
All cards. Advance bookings welcome

Business Opportunities

PARIS
service@vip-escorts.com
+33(0)1 42 21 12 12 / +33(0)1 42 21 12 12

Business Opportunities

ARISTOCATS Escort Service
Beautiful hot Paris Models
3 Chateaux St. London W1
London Tel: 0171 258 0380

HERBY HIGH SOCIETY VIENNA-PARIS
RIVERA ZURICH GERMANY
International Escort & Travel Service
Vienna +43(0)1 516 41 04 all credit cards

PARIS
Geneva Escort Service +41 79 8577894

CHELSEA Escort Service
51 Beauchamp Place, London SW1
Tel: 0171 584 6512

LENAS - LONDON ESCORT SERVICE
First Ladies for Discerning Gentlemen
Tel: 0171 584 2200 credit cards

ARISTOCATS - FRANKFURT - MAIN
"CHARLIE'S ESCORT AGENCY"
MOBILE PHONE 0177 1 59 99 99

Business Opportunities

OFFSHORE COMPANIES
Comprehensive Services
Tel: +44 (0) 1824 628391
Fax: +44 (0) 1824 625126
E-Mail: ash@offshore.co.uk
Web Site: www.ash-offshore.co.uk

ASTON CORPORATE TRUSTEES LTD

THE INTERMARKET
Continues on Page 9

RECRUITMENT

You will find below a selection of employment offers published in last Monday's International Herald Tribune. For a copy of last Monday's paper, please contact Sarah Wershtol, London: 44 171 420 0336
Chief, Press and Information P-4	United Nations Nations Unies	Mr. E. Esono Aguesom, Chief of Personnel, ICTR, P.O. Box 6016, Arusha, Tanzania. Fax No. 255 57 4000/4373 or 1 212 963 2848.
Senior Compliance Officer	Zurich Insurance Company	André Studer, Human Resources, Mythenquai 2, 8022 Zurich, Switzerland.
Head, Planning and Publications	Nato Headquarters	Reference OIPHT, Recruitment Officer, NATO Headquarters, 1110 Brussels, Belgium
Optical Shop Manager	AAFES Vision Center	Apply in person. Hanan Consolidated Exchange, Waliguan Keerun Building/Unit 503, AAFES Hamid, Attn: Ms. Jean Miller, Unit 20234, APO, AE 09165. fax: +1-9181-958432 or tel: +1-918-618

EUROPE

Fierce Fighting Reported in Kosovo

Despite a New U.S. Warning, Serb Forces Pursue All-Out Offensive

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Serbian forces pursued an all-out offensive Thursday against separatist fighters in Kosovo, despite a new U.S. warning of Western military intervention in the troubled Serbian province.

Serbian sources reported fierce fighting along the main Pristina-Prizren road southwest of Kosovo's capital, and clashes continued near the besieged village of Junik, close to the Albanian border.

Ethnic Albanians said Serbian forces were also shelling villages in the central Drenica region. Panina, an ethnic Albanian stronghold northwest of Pristina, was also under attack, the Albanian sources said.

Speaking late Wednesday, the U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke said the likelihood of intervention had increased dramatically as the Serb offensive continues, contrary to a promise last month from the Yugoslav president, Slobodan Milosevic, to halt military operations against Kosovo Liberation Army rebels.

Citing the latest wave of Serb violence, which drove up to 200,000 ethnic Albanians from their homes, the leader of Kosovo's Albanians and officials in neighboring Albania issued fresh calls for outside intervention.

The pleas came as international sentiment remained split over a possible military operation to try to halt the conflict, which Mr. Holbrooke said has entered an "extraordinarily dangerous new phase."

Also Thursday, the European Union approved $5.5 million for Kosovo to help refugees fleeing the fighting.

Albright Assails Serb Tactics

Steven Erlanger of The New York Times reported earlier from Washington.

The Clinton administration has warned President Milosevic that his tactics are unacceptable and could prompt NATO air strikes against him.

Senior American officials said the warning was delivered as a personal message from Secretary of State Madeleine Albright to Mr. Milosevic by an American diplomat, Christopher Hill.

They emphasized that the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Pentagon were working quickly to finish plans for limited air strikes that could take place, if ordered, within a week or 10 days.

But since NATO has not carried out any earlier threats over Kosovo, Mr. Milosevic may not take this warning seriously. He already has accomplished his aim of striking a serious blow to the ethnic Albanian insurgency in Kosovo.

"The problem of the day is how to be credible," a senior American official said. "But there is a lot of serious military planning now going on to create more realistic and flexible ways to use air power against Serb forces."

Mr. Milosevic is also likely to have taken heart by the removal from Kosovo policy of the American special envoy, Robert Gelbard, who advocated a tough line against the Yugoslav president.

Mr. Gelbard was ordered by the White House and Mrs. Albright to stick to Bosnia, officials said. They explained the shift by the approach of important countrywide elections next month in Bosnia, and said too much of Mr. Gelbard's time was being spent on Kosovo and not enough on Bosnia.

But some officials said Mr. Gelbard's shift was also a function of his sometimes impolitic advocacy of a tough stance toward Mr. Milosevic as the main destructive influence in the region, a stance that encompassed the threat of force.

But the White House has not been eager to get involved militarily in another part of the Balkans, its NATO allies are split and some of them want a UN Security Council resolution authorizing any action, which Moscow pledges to veto.

Kosovo policy is now more clearly in the hands of Richard Holbrooke, the nominee for chief of the United Nations, and his longtime collaborator, Mr. Hill, now the ambassador to Macedonia.

Ethnic Albanian refugees unloading boxes from a UN humanitarian aid convoy in Lapshevo, a village southwest of Pristina, Kosovo's capital.

EU to Examine Report on Mass Kosovo Graves

Agence France-Presse

MADRID — The NATO secretary-general, Javier Solana Madariaga, firmly dismissed Thursday reports of mass graves in the war-torn southern Serbian province of Kosovo, but the European Union still wants a team of medical experts to make sure.

Speaking on a Spanish radio station, Cadena Ser, Mr. Solana said, "There are no mass graves of the type described in a newspaper."

Nevertheless, the EU asked Belgrade on Thursday to admit a team of medical examiners to Kosovo to verify that the graves do not exist.

"We want to say clearly to the Serbs, 'Allow our experts into Kosovo so that they can prove that there are no mass graves,'" said a spokesman for the Austrian foreign minister, Wolfgang Schuessel. Austria holds the rotating EU presidency.

The Austrian newspaper Die Presse reported Wednesday that journalists had seen "the bodies of more than 500 people, including 400 children," in one grave and about 1,000 bodies in another. The reports were subsequently denied by EU observers and a UN expert.

The author of the newspaper report has since admitted that he had not personally seen the graves and that the article was based on an "informant."

Flemish Leader Envisions a Confederated Future for Belgium

By Barry James
International Herald Tribune

BRUSSELS — Although doomsayers predict that economic and linguistic contradictions in Belgium will eventually cause the nation to fall apart, the political leader of the richer, Dutch-speaking northern half of the country says he has no interest in heeding the siren call of nationalism.

Luc Van den Brande, the minister-president of Flanders, says his region has everything it takes to be a nation: a population of 6 million, larger than that of some countries in the European Union, good infrastructure, high educational standards and a thriving economy based largely on high-technology industries.

"But is it useful in the new Europe to create new independent nation states?" he asked in an interview. "That is a 19th century concept. My only aim is to have a good position for the Flemings in the world and in Europe."

Mr. Van den Brande is also president of the Assembly of European Regions, and he maintains that the EU will develop increasingly along regional rather than national lines, particularly after common currency is introduced in January.

This means, he said, that Flanders will increasingly seek to defend its economic interests outside of Belgium — in the southern part of the Netherlands, for example, in southern England and northern France — rather than in the French-speaking Wallonia in the southern half of the country.

This does not mean the Belgian partners must divorce. He said being in the same kingdom had added value in certain aspects. It made no sense, for example, for Flanders to have its own armed forces.

These questions will come to the fore next year when Belgium resumes constitutional talks and holds general elections. Mr. Van den Brande said he would push for the country to become a confederation of two autonomous regions. Thus if the Walloons choose to continue their policy of state involvement in industry, in contrast with Flanders' emphasis on private enterprise, he said, it will be entirely their affair. "We should each be free to go our own way," he said.

On paper, the Belgian regions already have a great deal of autonomy. They can, for example, sign treaties and agreements with other states, and Flanders already has with Poland, Hungary, the Baltic states, Romania, South Africa and Chile. But the autonomy is illusory, as the national government raises taxes and redistributes income to the regions. Flanders raises only about 10 percent of its revenue from its own resources. "This is an irresponsible system," Mr. Van den Brande said.

Mr. Van den Brande's proposal for a confederal Belgium faces two challenges. One is from the Vlaams Bloc in the Flanders region, an ultra-nationalist party that Mr. van den Brande said he hopes will be wiped out in next year's elections.

The other more intractable difficulty is the situation of Brussels, a multicultural, predominantly French-speaking enclave in the middle of Flanders. The expansion of the population into surrounding Dutch-speaking suburbs, and the decision by Flemish authorities to make it more difficult for the French-speakers to deal with the administration in their own language, are causing conflict.

Brussels forms a separate region, with its own government for less than a million people. At the same time, the French- and Dutch-speaking communities regard it as their capital and have their main government offices here. Yet in the evening, when ministries and offices close, the vast majority of the Flemish workers return to their homes in Flanders.

Wouldn't it make more sense to move the Flemish capital to Ghent or Antwerp? "No," Mr. Van den Brande replied. "Flanders needs Brussels, but Brussels would no longer be the capital of this country or even of Europe without Flanders." He rejected a proposal by Charles Piquet, president of the Brussels region, that the city should become the official capital of Europe.

"It would become a foreign body," Mr. Van den Brande said. "It would disconnect a bridging element in this country."

Mr. Van den Brande's proposals for the future of Belgium run parallel with the developing debate within the EU about "subsidiarity," or who is responsible for what and at what level. It was not a question of creating a patchwork of regions, Mr. Van den Brande said, but of devolving political power to its most appropriate level.

"Unity in diversity is one of the pillars of European political union," he said.

Luc Van den Brande of Flanders favors a Belgium with no factions.

BRIEFLY

Legionnaires' Disease Kills 4 People in Paris

PARIS — Four people — three French and one British — have died of Legionnaires' disease in Paris since the beginning of June, French health authorities said Thursday.

They said that 20 cases of the disease have been reported. Thirteen of the victims were out of danger, while three remained hospitalized.

The outbreak in central Paris apparently occurred during the World Cup soccer championships, which ran from June 10 to July 12. Half of the 20 cases were contracted between June 15 and 21, a statement said.

Testing of water and selected air-conditioning units focused on Paris's ninth district, where 13 of the victims spent some time, and the second district, officials said. The ninth district covers the major department stores and the Opera Garnier, and attracts numerous tourists.

Officials suspect that the bacteria that cause the pneumonia-like illness proliferated in water-cooling tanks on top of buildings. (AFP, Reuters, AP)

French Official Faces Corruption Charge

PARIS — A former French defense minister, Francois Leotard, will be indicted Friday for money laundering and illegal financing of a political party, the daily Le Monde reported Thursday.

Mr. Leotard and an aide, the center-right deputy Renaud Donnedieu de Vabre, will be placed under judicial examination, the report said.

They are suspected of moving 5 million francs ($830,000) between Luxembourg and Italy for Mr. Leotard's now-defunct Republican Party. (AFP)

'Blairizer' Is Cleared

LONDON — One of the most controversial figures at the heart of Tony Blair's government, his unselected, state-paid press spokesman, was cleared Thursday of allegations of "Blairizing" the government.

In a report by a parliamentary committee that investigated his role, the majority of Labour Party members on the committee refused to criticize Alastair Campbell's methods of securing the government favorable coverage. (AFP)

Polish Cross to Stay

WARSAW — The Roman Catholic Church in Poland appeared Thursday to reject Israeli demands to remove crosses near the Auschwitz death camp.

Cardinal Jozef Glemp, the leading Catholic clergyman in the country, said he wanted to keep in place a large cross that was erected in memory of Pope John Paul's 1979 visit. But he gave no clue to the future of 50 smaller crosses recently planted by fringe Catholic groups. (Reuters)

Todor Zhivkov, 86, Deposed Bulgarian

By David Binder
New York Times Service

Todor Zhivkov, who as the Communist ruler of Bulgaria became the longest-serving leader in the Soviet bloc and one of the last survivors of the old guard, died Wednesday at the age of 86.

He ruled Bulgaria from 1954 until he was overthrown in 1989. Mr. Zhivkov slipped into a coma after being hospitalized July 8 with a respiratory infection, hospital officials told official BTA news agency.

He also had suffered from diabetes and other ailments in recent months. Despite his high office, Mr. Zhivkov was a conventional party apparatchik and this, more than anything else, may have enabled him to endure the turmoil of Balkan politics and the periodic upheavals in the Kremlin, to which he paid fealty in his long career.

The only known threat to his rule was a failed coup in 1965 organized by a handful of party dissidents and some army officers, believed to be the first of its kind against a Communist regime.

Mr. Zhivkov said the coup was a pro-Chinese conspiracy. Others attributed it to the rigidity of his regime and his acquiescence to the Soviet Union.

In his heyday, Mr. Zhivkov boasted more than any other European Communist leader about his close ties with the Soviet Union, saying the countries "breathe with the same lungs, and the same blood flows in our veins."

This served him well through the three decades in which Nikita Khrushchev and Leonid Brezhnev ruled the Soviet bloc.

In the 1970s, a Bulgarian critic wrote that Mr. Zhivkov had earned "the reputation of a Communist leader who had caused the minimum of trouble for the Soviet Union."

But in November 1989, as East European regimes were collapsing one by one, he was brought down with the blessing of the reform-minded Mikhail Gorbachev in Moscow in a bloodless push organized by senior officials in Sofia, including the chief of staff.

They recognized that the Communist system in which they had all grown up was doomed and that Mr. Zhivkov would be an obstacle to transition.

During Mr. Zhivkov's long tenure, he authorized a forced assimilation drive against Bulgaria's 1 million ethnic Turks in the 1980s, in which more than 100 were killed and 310,000 forcibly expelled.

In a campaign that aroused international condemnation, ethnic Turks were deprived of linguistic, cultural and religious rights. They were dismissed from jobs and rounded up at night, trucked to police stations, and forced to change their Islamic names into Slavic names.

Mr. Zhivkov was responsible for the construction in 1959 of concentration camps for political prisoners just as the Soviet Union was dismantling Stalin's network of camps.

He was also said to have been behind the poison-pellet killing in London in 1978 of Georgii Markov, a Bulgarian writer in exile who had made mocking broadcasts about Mr. Zhivkov for Radio Free Europe.

Many of Mr. Zhivkov's actions were parallel to those of virtually all other Soviet bloc leaders: brutal collectivization of farmlands in what had once been a bountiful land; the installation of nuclear power reactors that had a Chernobyl-disaster potential; the opening of a huge steel factory that polluted the air of the valley of the Isker, including the capital, Sofia.

His legacy for his country of 9 million people included a foreign debt of $10 billion.

The Zhivkov-era concentration camps were at Kotsian, Bogdanov Dol, Belene Island in the Danube and Lovcha.

Disclosures of the camps' existence came in 1990, a few months after Mr. Zhivkov was ousted.

He was never tried for political crimes. Prosecutors concluded it would be too difficult to make charges stick. Instead, he was tried on charges of illegally spending the equivalent of $24 million in state funds.

In 1992, after a trial that lasted 18 months, during which he was scornful and defiant, he was convicted of embezzlement and sentenced to seven years in prison.

In deference to his heart problems and age, the middle-sized man with the long thin nose and the heavy jowls was allowed to serve his time under house arrest at the mountain home of his granddaughter overlooking Sofia, and even to make a foray to his birthplace in Pravets, northeast of the capital.

On that occasion, he bragged, "The whole country loves me."

In February 1996, Bulgaria's highest court acquitted him of the embezzlement charges, although he remained under indictment on charges of human rights abuses.

In effect, Mr. Zhivkov got away with murder.

MERITUS DISCOVER THE MERITS

Shangkai JC Mandarin

Hainan Mandarin, Haikou

KNOW US. LOVE US.
MERITUS
CHINA

From the prestigious and strategically located Shangkai JC Mandarin, one of the very few Leading Hotels of the World in China, to the five-star Hainan Mandarin, the only world-class business resort hotel in tropical Haikou, we're known and loved for our warm Asian hospitality, impeccable first class service and luxurious comfort. Meritus Hotels & Resorts (formerly SMI Hotels & Resorts) is ready to welcome in a new era in hospitality.

And we're ready to welcome you.

www.meritus-hotels.com

CORPORATE OFFICE: 355 Orchard Road, Singapore 238867 Tel: (65) 235 7788 Fax: (65) 235 0688
e-mail: hpm@meritus-hotels.com REGIONAL SALES OFFICES: HONG KONG Tel: (852) 2735 3222 Fax: (852) 2735 2881
KUALA LUMPUR Tel: (603) 245 8823 Fax: (603) 245 0823 LONDON Tel: (44) 171 583 5212 Fax: (44) 171 583 2161
LOS ANGELES Tel: (714) 228 0088 Fax: (714) 228 0883 SINGAPORE Tel: (65) 235 8888 Fax: (65) 235 4588 TOKYO
Tel: (81) 3 5063 0024 Fax: (81) 3 5063 0021 JOHANNESBURG (GSA) Tel: (27) 11 728 5271 Fax: (27) 11 085 1320

EDITORIALS/OPINION

Herald Tribune

PUBLISHED WITH THE NEW YORK TIMES AND THE WASHINGTON POST

Baghdad Must Comply

The UN Security Council now will consider the hudding crisis brought about by Saddam Hussein's latest refusal to cooperate with UN inspectors looking to see whether he has in fact eliminated all his weapons of mass destruction. The challenge that the Iraqi leader is making to the United Nations and to the peace and security of his region has become familiar during the eight years since the Gulf War. It deserves an uncompromising response: Iraq must respect its obligation to make good on its disclosure and dismantlement pledges to the United Nations.

The new showdown follows from Saddam Hussein's rejection of a UN offer to accelerate the pace of inspection so as to bring closer the day, long sought by Iraq, to lift international sanctions on Baghdad. Instead, Iraq denounced the inspectors and ordered its work cut off.

Why would Saddam blow his best-ever opportunity to break the sanctions? One theory centers on Iraq's frustration over America's alleged but ununderscored raising of inspection standards. A second theory centers on Iraq's frustration that the United States was keeping it from its evident goal of getting the sanctions lifted without having to abandon all its weapons of terror. To us, the second theory looks good. The burden never was on the United Nations to prove Iraq's treachery; it was on Iraq to prove by documents and disclosures its repudiation of its dirty-weapons past. But look at what has happened just recently. In June, inspectors found traces of VX on shell canisters. Iraq had said it never loaded this nerve gas on warheads. Last week the global nuclear inspectorate said it was unable to certify that Iraq has no nuclear weapons; Iraq has insisted that it has none.

The necessary full inspections can go forward only with Iraq's consent. But the sanctions can be ended only by the consent of the Security Council, where the United States has a veto. The Council members most interested in easing the sanctions should not be expecting the United States to ease Saddam's hand-tooled crisis by letting Iraq evade its disarmament obligations.

As for Kofi Annan, UN secretary-general, who personally negotiated a disclosure agreement with Saddam to deal with the crisis of last winter, the prestige of his office is at stake—not to mention that of his American sponsors.

—THE WASHINGTON POST

China Is Reforming

Over the last 20 years, China's army has become almost as formidable a force in the Chinese economy as it is in military affairs. Encouraged by the government to supplement official defense budgets with profits from army-owned businesses, the military developed a multibillion-dollar empire of some 15,000 companies, including clothing manufacturers, airlines and hotels as well as defense-related industries.

Last month, President Jiang Zemin ordered the army to sever its connections with these companies, with some of the lost revenues to be replaced by increased government spending. His initiative should reinforce China's economic and budgetary reforms, strengthen civilian authority over army leaders and create a more professional military, less likely to intervene in political affairs or complicate relations between China and the United States.

Having army-owned businesses sell defense equipment to the military induced corruption. Army businesses also proved ideal conduits for smuggling, with their ability to move luxury goods undetected across borders. The financial cushion provided by these businesses also made military leaders dangerously independent of government control and individually rich and powerful.

Since consolidating power last fall, Mr. Jiang has put forward a surprisingly ambitious agenda of reforms, including closing unprofitable state industries, reducing government bureaucracy and, now, extricating the army from business. He has also encouraged a limited debate about introducing more democracy into China's authoritarian political system.

These are promising steps, pointing toward a better governed, more market-oriented and slightly freer China. China now has a leader with a reform plan and the political authority to put it into effect.

—THE NEW YORK TIMES

Let Reno Think It Over

Charles La Bella and Louis Freeh, the Justice Department's top authorities on campaign fund-raising abuses, have now testified publicly that federal law requires the appointment of an independent counsel to investigate allegations of financial abuses in President Bill Clinton's 1996 campaign. The reason, they explained, is that Attorney General Janet Reno has a conflict of interest that makes it impossible for her to supervise honestly an investigation of the man who appointed her.

The legal reasoning is correct and obvious to everyone but Ms. Reno. She has said that she needs three weeks to study the report drafted by Mr. La Bella, the former head of the Justice Department's campaign finance task force.

The attorney general should not need so long to master basic law, but we think it is better to give her the time than to hold her in contempt of Congress, as proposed by Representative Dan Burton, chairman of the House Committee on Government Reform and Oversight.

Two wise students of the Democratic campaign abuses, Senator Orrin Hatch and Representative Henry Hyde, favor giving Ms. Reno the requested time so that she can think her way through this with the help of Mr. La Bella's 94-page report and a memorandum from Mr. Freeh, the director of the FBI.

Mr. Burton threatens the contempt action because he wants a look at those documents. But a confrontation over the reports would be unwise on legal grounds and counterproductive at a time when, thanks to Mr. Freeh and Mr. La Bella, the pressure is mounting on Ms. Reno to get out of the way and let an independent investigation proceed.

All that said, we can sympathize with Mr. Burton's frustration when Ms. Reno accuses his committee of proposals that would "risk creating a Justice Department and an FBI that lack to political winds instead of following the facts and the law."

Ms. Reno has given the nation a politicized Justice Department. Mr. Freeh and Mr. La Bella have given her reports that instruct her in bow to straighten out that department. Everyone in Washington knows what the law requires. The Freeh and La Bella reports give Ms. Reno a reasonable, if belated, way to clean up her mistake.

—THE NEW YORK TIMES

Other Comment

Israeli Construction

During the past five years, Israeli construction in the West Bank and Jerusalem has doubled. And this has been coupled with more than 700 home demolitions by Israelis that have created great fear among many Palestinians.

The settlement and road construction in the West Bank and Jerusalem must be seen to be understood and believed. Settlements are now huge and sprawling cities that surround and engulf eastern Jerusalem.

Having lost their surrounding lands, and with new Jewish construction right up to their doorsteps, the tiny Palestinian villages in the environs of the city have been swallowed whole by stone behemoths that will house tens of thousands of new settlers.

Where hills are not being razed for new housing construction, they are being cut through for massive superhighways. These new roads, with their tunnels and overpasses, accomplish two objectives. Most settlers can now take a new superhighway direct from their settlement to Jerusalem or Tel Aviv without ever crossing through an Arab village. And the roads cut the West Bank into ribbons so that the Arab areas are severed from one another.

—James J. Zogby, president of the Arab American Institute, commenting in the Los Angeles Times.

America and Iran Need to Get Together Patiently

By Flora Lewis

PARIS — Despite vague expressions of interest in improving relations, a Paris encounter between an American and an Iranian last week showed that there is still a very long way to go, and a very different view on each side of the history that led to rupture and hostility between the two countries.

The American, Barry Rosen, had been held as a hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran for 444 days, which he remembered with obviously great distress. The Iranian, Abbas Abdi, was one of the students who directed the seizure of the embassy in 1979. They had not met since, and they managed to shake hands after a couple of hours of public debate, although Mr. Abdi refused to express any regrets for the forced imprisonment, saying, "Our whole nation was held hostage for 25 years."

The meeting was arranged by the Cyprus-based organization Centre for World Dialogue, one of the many non-governmental groups springing up around the world with the aim of finding ways to enable people to talk out their grievances when their governments can't. It revealed, in a subtle way, what must be a raging argument in Iran about opening up the country and making up with the United States.

Although he castigated the media for failing to report what was going on in his country before the revolution, Mr. Abdi refused to say anything about what is happening now. He would not even say why he was imprisoned for eight months in 1993 and since 1996 has been banned from publishing or editing the newspaper with which he is still associated.

But he listed both punishments at the end of a long résumé otherwise full of his exploits on behalf of the Khomeini revolution.

Evidently, the pressures for relaxation have not gone far enough to make it safe to talk about them publicly abroad. But he did come, and, in an ironic detail, he was the only member of the three-man panel who did not sport a traditional Islamic beard. The American panelist and the French mediator both did.

The exchange showed how much each side still misconstrued the history of their confrontation. Mr. Abdi said the students who invaded the embassy thought they would keep the hostages for a week at most, and that they would find support from American public opinion, which had forced the United States out of Vietnam.

It is clear that the prime motive for the seizure was not to challenge the United States but to force the resignation of the Iranian prime minister and foreign minister, who, the Khomeini revolutionaries feared, might make a deal with the United States to overthrow them.

The mullahs had gained considerable power through the Mossadegh revolution in 1951, but they were ousted by a U.S.-backed coup which restored the shah's power in 1953. The memory still burns. Mr. Abdi said that if relations were resumed with the United States, it should be on the "pre-1953 basis."

Just before the hostages were taken, the then U.S. national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, had met the Iranian prime minister and foreign minister at a big anniversary celebration in Algiers. He told them, and repeated publicly, that the United States "has nothing against religion and Iran," so they could get along. Immediately on their return, the embassy crisis led to their overthrow.

But the United States took it as a direct assault. President Jimmy Carter said he would not go out of the White House Rose Garden to campaign until he had secured the hostages' release. Americans everywhere displayed yellow ribbons to show their sympathy with the diplomats. The Tehran students discovered to their surprise that they had a much bigger political weapon than they had imagined, so they clung to it.

Meanwhile, Iraq's invasion of Iran mobilized national feeling and helped the Khomeini regime to consolidate. Iranians claim that the United States aided Iraq, which was not the case until late in the eight-year war when Iran seemed on the way to victory. There is every reason to believe that the push for modernization and moderation now delicately but visibly stirring in Iran would have begun a decade earlier but for Saddam Hussein's attack.

It is clearly a push from below, particularly from the young in support of President Mohammed Khatami, who first suggested starting cultural exchanges to warm up relations with America. But Mr. Abdi, who obviously agrees, showed by his reticence that too warm a response by Americans might hurt more than help his cause in the conflict with hard-line fundamentalists.

It is time for the United States and Iran to find a way to reconciliation. But grave past misdeeds of each other's intentions and expectations remains a barrier, and the cloudy situation in Iran makes assumptions of how best to go about it unwise at this point.

Goodwill is not enough when historic wounds still ache. Ignorance is a serious handicap.

Flora Lewis

Yes, Watch Asia's Crisis, but This Is No Time to Panic

By Richard Medley

NEW YORK — Eight times in the past three years the U.S. stock market has corrected sharply, and each time the correction has been a buying opportunity for investors and a Rorschach test for analysts who see what they most want to see in each downturn.

So far, we have heard that this summer's correction has been Lewinsky-related, earnings-based, technically overdue or the result of Venus transiting into Sagittarius.

Unfortunately, the only serious explanation is that more people want to sell stocks than want to buy them, and the downturn will not end until more people want to buy them than sell them.

So what do you do with that if you are Alan Greenspan? Keep your eyes on Asia and wonder why the fate of Western economies rests with two oar ologians in Tokyo and a pannel of Communists in a Chinese resort town.

Unfortunately, the levers to keep American growth solidly on track are not in Washington. With the budget balanced, monetary policy on hold and private sector investment chugging along, the big risk is that officials might reflexively respond to a serious correction with a shift in policy.

In fact, we can all say a little prayer that Mr. Greenspan understands that "First, do no harm" applies to economics as well as to medicine.

It may be hard to remember, but last spring there was a pnsb to raise interest rates by Fed hawks who concluded that the Asian crisis was past and had done America no harm.

Far from it. While the first wave of the Asian depression had beneficial effects, by keeping inflation and interest rates low, the second wave is not as benign, as American manufacturers now know.

Right now, Asia has entered a critical phase. Japan must begin growing again, and China must hold still, despite enormous economic problems, or the world will decline into a wider recession.

That is why the United States has been hammering on Japan since late last year to stimulate its economy before it drags the rest of Asia and then the West over the cliff. In fact, Japanese leaders are finally getting serious about digging themselves out of their eight-year recession.

Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa calls himself an repentant Keynesian and he looks set to prove it, embarking on a stimulus program anchored by corporate and individual tax cuts worth $85 billion, as well as by plans to spend an additional $200 billion on public works projects to pave over everything that doesn't move. He is backed by Noboru Takeshita, current kingmaker and former prime minister.

Japan's central bank seems to be printing money around the clock, flooding markets with trillions of yen needed to drive down the cost of loans to weakened banks. By late September, if the first glimmers of stability in business conditions are not visible, it will be time to panic.

And then there is China. As senior officials gather for their informal summit meeting in the resort of Beidaihe, Prime Minister Zhu Rongji is carrying bad oews from the provinces.

Warehouses are filled with unsold products, and the debt loads of state-owned enterprises are piling up. Financial markets are smelling blood, and speculation against the yuan in China's limited currency market has increased noticeably in recent days.

China will be forced to devalue its currency if Japan does not recover this fall. This would guarantee a new wave of competitive devaluation across Asia as each country struggles to push exports into the saturated American and closed European markets. Debt burdens of these already bankrupt countries would only increase.

But such a gloomy chain of events might not come to pass if Japan's embrace of Keynesian economics works and if China keeps its promise to Washington and does not devalue its currency. The virtue of crises is that they tend to bring the most exceptional talents to bear.

The danger, of course, is that the room for maneuvering might disappear, and then nothing is possible.

That is what American officials most want to avoid, and they are well aware that any action by them — from cutting interest rates to stopping the dollar's rise — could unintentionally shrink the room for maneuvering in Asia. Thus they will keep their hands far away from the policy levers.

You and I, meanwhile, should be content to ride out the stock market's lurches and buy on the dips once again.

The writer is managing partner of Medley Global Advisors. He contributed this comment to The New York Times.

While Japan Drags Its Heels, China Is Reforming

By Miron Mushkat

HONG KONG — Japan and China, with Asia's two largest economies, confront a similar predicament. Both are grappling with decelerating growth and deflation. Both are plagued by symptoms of overcapacity, poor profitability and financial stress.

These difficulties cannot be dismissed as the product of temporary factors. They are caused by structural imbalances that may not be easy to correct. Japan and China have relied for too long on a development model in which bank loans have been used inefficiently to promote exports and investment in factories and other fixed assets.

But this is where the similarities end. Japan displays neither the willingness nor the ability to address decisively the many problems it faces. China, on the other hand, tackles impediments to growth head-on, and constantly tries to enhance its economic management capabilities.

The problems confronting Japan are deep-seated and interconnected. Using a hammer rather than a sledgehammer for comprehensive surgery rather than selective tinkering, are the appropriate responses in such circumstances. But the policy establishment in Tokyo is frozen and unable to address the challenge in a timely and effective manner.

By contrast, China has committed itself to reform and sought to create institutions conducive to policy innovation.

The far-reaching administrative and fiscal decentralization carried out in recent years is a case in point. While undermining to some extent the position of the central government, it has invigorated communities at the local and provincial level to such a degree that they are now the principal source of policy initiative in the country. Reform is thus a bottom-up process.

Administrative and fiscal decentralization has provided impetus for the rapid growth of private enterprise at the local and provincial level in China, and the emergence of a subnational layer of government dependent on that enterprise.

A healthy provincial economy, for example, boosts local tax revenues and underpins public employment. Provincial and local officials consequently have a strong interest in nurturing private enterprise within their areas, and act as its advocates in Beijing.

The massive mandatory retirement program for revolutionary veterans in China has made the central government less resistant to change. As a result of the departure of the remnants of the old regime, relatively young and well educated bureaucrats have been promoted to the high echelons of the civil service.

These officials generally support reform. They are also flexible and pragmatic.

Another significant institutional reform in China has been to allow government employees to leave the bureaucracy and join private sector organizations. This has helped to transform the attitudes of civil servants at all levels and fostered a climate of policy innovation.

Moderate reformers in China dominate the policy councils and have mapped out a viable succession strategy to ensure policy continuity well into the early part of the next century.

While they may lack the zeal of their radical counterparts, it does not mean that they are opponents of the endless superficial tinkering that is the hallmark of "reform" in Japan.

The Chinese reformers are willing to take selective risks in pursuit of their goals. What distinguishes them from their radical counterparts is the reluctance to attack on all fronts simultaneously. Their preference is for strategies that focus on only a handful of major problems — for example, the banking system and state-owned enterprises.

China's reform-minded leaders worry that, as in the Soviet Union toward the end of the Gorbachev era, chaos might ensue if they tried to achieve too much in too short a time.

The writer is vice chairman and director of economics and strategy at Indocam Asia Asset Management, the fund management arm of Crédit Agricole financial services group. He contributed this personal comment to the International Herald Tribune.

An Asian Assignment for Rubin

By Tom Plate

LOS ANGELES — Were the condition of the U.S. economy today nearly as troubled as Asia's, Americans would be looking for people to blame. Robert Rubin's name would be no better than that of Ryutaro Hashimoto, the fallen Japanese prime minister.

With the U.S. economy in its seventh year of boom, why isn't the Treasury secretary the happiest soul on the planet? Because the final chapter of Bill Clinton's run has yet to be written.

This administration's unraveling, if it doesn't happen with an impeachment, could come because of Asia, whose miseries are beginning to wash up on American shores.

Last week, as the news surfaced that U.S. economic growth had dropped to 1.4 percent in the second quarter after a buoyant 5.5 percent in the first, the most pointed comments by Mr. Rubin during a conversation were about China and Japan.

No surprise. Asia will not be able to emerge from its tailspin if either Beijing or Tokyo responds to this historic crisis in impunity or parochialism.

In Asia, Mr. Rubin's June meeting with China's economic czar, Zhu Rongji, was covered like a papal visit. His words on U.S. economic policy are weighed and analyzed abroad as if they were gold. Mr. Rubin, the Wall Street multimillionaire, is widely regarded in Asia as the world's second most powerful official, after Mr. Clinton.

Mr. Rubin is loyal to his boss, but he is under family pressure to return to New York.

Asked if he had become bleak about Asia's prospects, he replies by admitting only to "concern." But he is well aware that Chinese export sales in Asia have plummeted, that overall mainland growth looks to be sagging below the 8 percent annual target set by Beijing, and that in Shanghai the office vacancy rate is so high that no Chinese official will publicly profess the true, undoubtedly catastrophic figure.

Yet, having met Mr. Zhu, Mr. Rubin expresses a bit more than idle hope that China will hang tough and that a currency devaluation will not be automatic even if the yen continues to sink. "Japan affects all the world," he sighs, "but when I was in China, they expressed their determination to proceed on the basis of their self-interest and maintain the [currency]."

His concern about Asia becomes palpably great irritation when the topic turns to Japan. And if his attacks on Tokyo are perceived in many parts of Asia as typical of American arrogance, it must be conceded that his economic management, in tandem with Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, has been more adroit than that of the half-dozen successive failed Japanese prime ministers with whom he and his boss Mr. Clinton have had to wrestle.

When asked if Washington's public posture toward Tokyo might come up disagreeably short in the savvy department (in Japan, Mr. Rubin is sometimes described as a "megaphone" diplomat), Mr. Rubin pauses for a few tense seconds before answering:

"What happens in Japan is critical to what happens in Asia and the rest of the world. Yes, the United States has been rightly focusing on [Japan], but so has the rest of the world. Japan has needed to act decisively all along."

The Japanese have been difficult and even wrong. But U.S. policy in Asia has not been without missteps. If there is an Achilles' heel, it is that Mr. Clinton and Mr. Rubin have relied on the IMF to a fault.

But, asked if he agrees that IMF performance has been very mixed, Mr. Rubin demurs. "These are unprecedented and complex issues. Many countries are in trouble all at the same time; there are problems in each one which affect the other countries. Japan is the second largest economy and by many multiples the largest in the region. The IMF has done a good job."

"It's easy to be a critic, but there are no easy solutions. The best argument for the IMF? It's the possibility of a substantial escalation [of the crisis] — that is a real possibility. It would have a severe impact on the United States. The IMF is a core institution that responds to protect the global economy and our financial concerns."

Mr. Rubin believes that Coogress will ultimately authorize all that the administration has asked in additional IMF funding. "The U.S. agricultural community is beginning to get behind it. The American people are beginning to see how our world economy really is."

He knows that the Clinton presidency could come unglued over Asia. It is his job to reduce the odds of that happening.

Los Angeles Times.

IN OUR PAGES: 100, 75 AND 50 YEARS AGO

1898: Mediaeval Spain

PARIS — The "Nene Freie Presse" says: "It is a pity for the Spanish people that they must bend to the conditions of the American people. The hard lesson may be for their good. There are States which benefit by a defeat because it forces them to introspection and conversion. Spain can recover from this unhappy war if she modernizes her Government and shakes off the mediocrity that still clings to her. But her proud dream of becoming the seventh Great Power lies buried beneath the waves of the Atlantic Ocean, from which her world empire once rose."

1923: Faith in Beauty

PARIS — Women the world over are reverting to their faith in feminine charm, according to Miss Dorothy Gray, a noted American "beauty sculptor." "Though I am by no means a reactionary, I think this is a healthy sign. Women are beginning to feel a little disappointed in the false promise of liberty, the ballot and equal rights, and want once more to exercise the most elemental of weapons — beauty. If they really succeed in combining the two, poor man will hardly have a chance."

1948: Mixed Marriages

GENEVA — The United Nations adopted a resolution deploring laws "forbidding mixed marriage between persons differing in color, nationality, race or religion." "The Soviet delegation accused the United States of injecting 'for political reasons' a resolution asking information from governments on the right of women married to foreigners to leave their homelands. The Russians threatened to bring up alleged American laws against marriage between white and black

Herald Tribune

ESTABLISHED 1887

KATHARINE GRAHAM, ARTHUR OCHS SULZBERGER
Co-Chairmen of the BoardPETER C. GOLDMARK JR., Chairman and Chief Executive Officer
RICHARD WOOLDRIDGE, President and Chief Operating Officer
MICHAEL GETTLER, Executive EditorWALTER WELLS, Managing Editor • PAUL HORVITZ, Deputy Managing Editor
KATHERINE KNORR and CHARLES MITCHELLMORE, Deputy Editors • SAMUEL ABT and CARL GEWIRTZ, Associate Editors • ROBERT J. DONAHUE, Editor of the Editorial Pages
JONATHAN GAGE, Business and Finance EditorRENÉ BONDY, Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer
DIDER BRUN, Circulation and Development Director
STEPHEN DUNBAR-JOHNSON, Advertising Director
Directeur de la Publication: Peter C. Goldmark Jr.International Herald Tribune, 181 Avenue Charles-de-Gaulle, 92521 Neuilly-sur-Seine, France.
Tel.: (1) 41.43.93.00. Fax: Subscriptions, (1) 41.43.92.10; Advertising, (1) 41.43.92.12; News, (1) 41.43.93.38.
Internet address: <http://www.ihb.com> E-Mail: ihb@ihb.comEditor for Asia: Michael Richardson, 5, Campbell Road, Singapore 11980. Tel: (65) 472-7768. Fax: (65) 274-2334
Mng. Dir. Asia: Terry Dwyer, 11201, 191 Joo Road, Hong Kong. Tel: 852-2922-1188. Fax: 852-2922-1190
Gen. Mng. Germany: T. Schiller, Friedrichstr. 14, 49109 Bielefeld, Tel: +49 521 7550-0 Fax: +49 521 7550-20
Pres. U.S. Am. Branches: 800 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. Tel: (212) 753-3880. Fax: (212) 755-4785
U.K. Advertising Office: 63 Long Acce, London WC2E. Tel: (171) 1836-4802. Fax: (171) 240-2345
S.A.S. on capital of 1,200,000 F. RCS Nanterre B 732021126. Commission Paritaire No. 61377
©1998, International Herald Tribune. All rights reserved. ISSN: 0244-8022

OPINION/LETTERS

Workers vs. 'The Street'
In Booming America

By E. J. Dionne Jr.

WASHINGTON — Even in the middle of a long economic boom in which worker shortages are starting to drive up wages, Americans with good jobs are afraid of losing them. That is why autoworkers struck General Motors for almost two months, at the cost of about $1 billion in lost wages.

The company lost a lot, too — an estimated $2 billion. At the end of this costly struggle, GM agreed to keep certain plants open for a while and to live up to promises to invest in them. The company got some productivity concessions. You could score this as a narrow victory for the union, or as an expensive tie that leaves the toughest issues for the future.

This strike did not capture the public imagination as last summer's United Parcel Service strike did, but the dispute hit close to home for many workers. In the new economy, even profitable companies are under relentless pressure to cut costs and promote efficiencies.

Such moves sometimes send jobs outside the United States or, more often, to lower-cost, lower-paying producers elsewhere in America. Either way, the threat to existing jobs is felt keenly.

Kim Moody, director of Labor Notes, a pro-union magazine based in Detroit, says that the leadership of the United Auto Workers is "under tremendous pressure from below" to fight job losses. This is not a case of "labor bosses" flexing muscles but of union leaders responding to worried members.

What is happening is a fundamental shift of power inside American companies — from managers to stockholders and Wall Street analysts who demand ever leaner, more productive corporations. When managers do not deliver, the company stock suffers.

The pressure is coming from Wall Street and this universe of shareholders and analysts," says a UAW official who asked not to be named. "There's been a drumbeat that GM has to shed 50,000 workers, 80,000 workers. It's a drumbeat that management is taking more seriously."

Now let's stipulate: GM is competing against other car companies that have achieved some of the efficiencies GM now seeks, Ford and Chrysler, which have a history of better relations with the union and negotiated for efficiencies earlier, are seen by stock analysts as having more of that lean look popular on "The Street."

GM also confronts a fundamental conflict with the union over time. As the bank economists David L. Littman and William T. Wilson pointed out in The Detroit News in June, the average age of the UAW worker at GM is approaching 50.

For many union members, who can retire after 30 years on the job, keeping a plant open even for just a few more years can make a difference between modest comfort and a huge disruption in their lives. Company managers, say Mr. Littman and Mr. Wilson, are thinking about a competitive strategy for the next decade. But workers on the line see that strategy as threatening jobs that they like, that pay well and that offer decent benefits.

GM and the UAW were simply playing out a drama that is being enacted all across the country, often at nonunion companies.

"People are simply fighting to hold on to what they have," said Andrew Stern, president of the Service Employees International Union. "These fights are not about massive wage increases or massive benefit increases. A good job with good benefits is a precious commodity in America today."

That, perhaps, is why the strikers, not the company, appear to have won the war for public opinion. A CBS News poll found that 46 percent of the public backed the union, while 37 percent backed GM. Fifty-two percent of those under 30 years old said they favored the autoworkers.

The UAW leadership was unable to capitalize on these glimmers of support because it could not declare this a strike on national issues. Its contract with GM is not up until next year, and a national strike would be illegal. GM had gone to court to make this point. The union had to insist this was about local disagreements.

But inevitably what is at stake is national and, in the broadest sense, political: ensuring opportunity in a growing economy. GM and the UAW will fight again another day, carrying on an argument that affects companies and workers all over the nation.

Washington Post Writers Group

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

On East Timor

Regarding "Jakarta Details Partial Autonomy for East Timor" (July 29):

Jakarta's claims of troop withdrawals are farcical. Its claim to have withdrawn a first group of 400 soldiers, to be followed by 600 more, lacks credibility. Indonesia must be compelled to accept international verification of its troop presence in the territory and of their withdrawal.

There are an estimated 20,000 to 30,000 troops in East Timor, far more than Jakarta admits. However, even if we were to believe Indonesia's claims, the withdrawal of 1,000 troops is a token gesture that will do nothing to reduce tension and violence in the territory.

In an extraordinary display of a lack of good faith, Jakarta has announced at the same time that 800 "noncombat" public service troops, such as doctors, teachers and agricultural experts, will be sent to East Timor shortly.

If Indonesia is serious about helping the East Timorese cope with the lack of such personnel, why isn't it sending civilians instead? In any case, the East Timorese people have no confidence in Indonesian civilian personnel, who are among the most incompetent and corrupt in the world.

As for Foreign Minister Ali Alatas's statement that "there is no way that there can be an independent East Timor," who gave him the right to decide which nations should be free and which should not?

Mr. Alatas added that East Timor "would be highly dependent and always have great difficulty in scraping a living." East Timor has been quite profitable for the Suharto family and the many generals who looted its coffee, sandalwood and marble to the tune of tens of millions of dollars a year.

Now, as the Australian mining company BHP has announced, millions of dollars in oil revenue will be generated in the "Timor Gap" area. Other oil companies are also working in the area.

It verges on the ridiculous that one of the most corrupt, bankrupt, mismanaged and unstable countries in the world today should dispense judgment about the economic viability and political independence of another country.

Mr. Alatas also repeated a favorite mantra: that a referendum on self-determination in East Timor could spark a civil war.

The reality is that the violence in East Timor is promoted by the Indonesian Army. It alone is responsible for the continuing tension and killings in the territory.

If Indonesia genuinely fears a civil war in East Timor in the event of a referendum, there are a few preventive measures it can take now: All hooligans and paramilitary groups should be disbanded and weapons collected. A UN police force should be brought in to the territory, and a new local police force should be trained by the UN. All Indonesian troops should leave, the sooner the better.

One last thing: Reports of rape of Chinese women in Indonesia are the tip of the iceberg of racially inspired violence against non-Javanese ethnic groups organized by the Indonesian Army over decades. In the first days and weeks of the Indonesian invasion of East Timor in 1975, hundreds of ethnic Chinese of East Timor were massacred and women raped.

JOSE RAMOS-HORTA, Lisbon.

The writer, deputy president of the National Council of Timorese Resistance, shared the 1996 Nobel Peace Prize with East Timor's Roman Catholic bishop, Carlos Felipe Ximenes Belo.

Learning Late the Ways
Of the Natural World

By Ellen Goodman

CASCO BAY, Maine — The phoebes have taken flight. The boldest of the four offspring achieved a shaky lift-off Friday. He took a short hop to a nearby pine tree and sat there for a while, twitching in surprise at his own audacity. Theo he took wing across the road.

By Monday, his three sibling flycatchers had gathered up their nerve as well. Now they are all airborne and on their own.

The oest that served as the hub of their activity holds only the downy residue of their infancy. The air that was filled with the noisy demands of a growing family is quiet. The parents who maintained their guard post on a nearby phone line are off duty.

The porch that they claimed is once again ours. My husband and I stand here, making light of our empty-nest syndrome.

"They don't call. They don't write," I tell him. "They don't need college tuition. They don't borrow the car." He is answers.

It is just five weeks since two taupe-colored migrants staked out the territory under the porch roof. Swiftly, they built a new nest exactly where an old one had been.

For the first time, I witnessed the entire cycle from nesting to fledgling. I watched this two-worker family condense 18 years of child-raising labor into five nonstop weeks.

On the days I worked here, confined to a computer screen, linking words together for a living, I was distracted, or attracted, by my avian boarders. These parents streaked across my peripheral vision, back and forth, on endless urgent missions of food delivery for their adolescents.

At times it seemed the world at my fingertips and the world at my front door were wholly disconnected. One on the Internet and the other on wing, one global and the other local, one made of artificial intelligence and the other replete with natural instinct. They did not even touch.

But standing here, I wonder how I learned to build a sentence before I knew how birds built a nest. How I had found my way around a foreign city before I had learned my way around my own front porch. Surely I have lived life backward, learning to read words before nature.

It occurs to me that many of my young computer-savvy friends get their hands on a mouse before they know the natural namesake. They know long division before they know how flowers multiply.

As parents we would be up in arms if our children did not know the alphabet. But we don't notice when they cannot read the landscape. Our daughters can distinguish Posh from Baby Spice before they know the difference between the sound of a yellow warbler and a brown thrasher.

During this summer of the phoebes, I kept Marie Winn's charming and quirky book "Red-Tails in Love" on my night table. It is the story of hawks that survive and reproduce in the circumscribed "wilds" of Central Park. It is also about the claque of devoted bird-watchers whose home turf is Manhattan, native soil of skyscrapers.

When these bird-watchers stood in the park, binoculars trained upward, watching the young hawks, tourists and passersby would stop and ask, "Who are you looking at?" It was as if the city folk could not imagine any celebrity from another species.

But I, too, have only lately paid attention to my natural co-habitants. I've had to learn "bird" as a second language, commuting sheepishly with remedial tapes of songbirds while my friends listen to literature and public radio. Maybe we spend so much of our young lives learning the skills to make it in the world that we learn our place in the world much later.

The week the phoebes took flight, the oews came relentlessly screaming for attention — a gunman in the Capitol, Monica gets immunity — like an alarm clock. We are sometimes told to take a oews fast just to restore our equilibrium. But there is more restoration in this feast of phoebes.

Here, on the porch, without a care for such urgent human concerns, yet another generation of flycatchers has taken wing.

"Hope," wrote Emily Dickinson, "is the thing with feathers/That perches in the soul."

The Boston Globe.

BOOKS

THE MAN WHO LOVED ONLY NUMBERS:
The Odd Story of Paul Erdos and His Search for Mathematical Truth
By Paul Hoffman. 243 pages.
$22.95. Hyperion.

Reviewed by Kay Redfield Jamison

THIS is one of the most captivating books I have read in years. Paul Hoffman, publisher of Encyclopedia Britannica and former editor in chief of Discover magazine, has written a completely absorbing, fast-paced memoir of the mathematician Paul Erdos (1913-1996), an odd, brilliant and completely original human being and mind. Hoffman also has brought vividly, very vividly, to life the world of pure mathematics and the psychologically fragile mathematicians who pursue the ultimate beauty that comes in the form of elegant proofs to seemingly unsolvable problems.

It would be impossible and pointless to remain immune to the charm of the Budapest-born Erdos who lived, inhaled and loved with abandon prime numbers — and all that he could see and imagine in them. Nothing in the real world tethered him to it: "He had no wife or children, no job, no hobbies, not even a home to tie him down. He lived out of a shabby suitcase and a drah orange plastic bag."

He pushed on from place to place with an almost fathomless, restless energy. A colleague observed that Erdos "kind of cantered down the street like a big ape, hunched over, moving sideways, his arms swinging. . . . He always moved fast." Most of his energy seems to have been innate, but he ingested vast quantities of amphetamines and coffee which, no doubt, helped keep the momentum going. From the time he was 21 he "hardly ever slept in the same bed for seven consecutive nights."

His mathematical genius and productivity were legendary in his lifetime. He wrote or co-authored more than 1,500 academic papers, "many of them monumental, and all of them substantial."

Extraordinary natural brilliance was coupled to a singular passion for his work and an utter, almost incomprehensible single-mindedness. It is reported that Erdos sent out 1,500 letters a year, none of which dwelt on subjects other than mathematics. "I am in Australia," a typical letter began. "Tomorrow I leave for Hungary. Let k be the largest integer."

For those who believe poets and artists are, as one reviewer of a book I wrote once put it, "a few apples short of a picnic," Erdos's statement that "we mathematicians are all a bit crazy" seems to understate the world of pure mathematics as portrayed by Hoffman: The Cambridge don G.H. Hardy, the father of modern analytic number theory, twice attempted suicide, and his brilliant Indian protégé, Ramanujan, once threw himself in front of a London subway train (he survived, only to die later of tuberculosis); Yutaka Taniyama, a brilliant postwar mathematician, committed suicide at the age of 31, and the Austrian logician Kurt Godel, who was in and out of psychiatric hospitals, starved himself to death later in life. To this list could be added many more, including Emil Leon Post and Georg Cantor, both of whom were hospitalized for manic-depression, and Alan Turing, who committed suicide in 1954.

The psychological frailties and peculiarities of mathematicians are presented by Hoffman in full force, but it is primarily the excitement, zest and rarefied heights of pure mathematics that permeate the book, and linger long after one has put it down. So, too, does the passion for beauty. The author quotes G.H. Hardy as saying:

"The mathematician's patterns, like the painter's or the poet's, must be beautiful; the ideas, like the colours or the words, must fit together in a harmonious way. Beauty is the first test: there is no permanent place in the world for ugly mathematics. . . . It may be very hard to define mathematical beauty, but that is just as true of beauty of any kind — we may not know quite what we mean by a beautiful poem, but that does not prevent us from recognizing one when we read it."

It is this pursuit of the beautiful that is constantly alluring. And addictive. Erdos had to be assigned an assistant to help him teach his mathematics classes because he was known to leap up and impulsively bound off in order to finish a proof he was working on.

When he was undergoing a corneal transplant, he was so obsessed with losing time from his work that the doctor had to call Erdos a academic department and ask them to send over a mathematician to talk prime numbers with him. Only then could the surgery proceed.

Paul Erdos was greatly loved by those who knew and worked with him, and it is easy to see why. He was brilliant, kind, and very odd. He, and his strange but marvelous world, are captured beautifully in this book. Although there is a fair amount of mathematical discussion in "The Man Who Loved Only Numbers," it can be read, partially read, or maneuvered around. It in no way should discourage even the most mathematically illiterate from buying this book.

Kay Redfield Jamison, professor of psychiatry at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, wrote this for The Washington Post.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

AT the start of the American Contract Bridge League's Summer National Championships in Chicago, a squad from the New York area has reached the semifinal of the Grand National Team Championship.

Luella Slater and Joel Friedberg of Scarsdale, New York, Marty Bergen of Farmingdale, New York, Ethan Stein of Irvington, New York, Steve Weinstein of Glen Ridge, New Jersey, and Fred Hart of West Hurley, New York, face a California team.

Experts sometimes imagine the possibility of some brilliant stroke. They may wait for years for the possibility, but when the chance comes, the situation may not be quite as planned. Friedberg was long conscious of the chance the spade suit in the diagramed deal could present. If the spade king is led, the declarer may be able to score a triumph by dropping the jack. This is likely to persuade the opening leader to continue, when the declarer has reason to fear a shift to another suit.

This layout occurred in the New York Regional Championships in December 1995, and Friedberg was South. When the spade king was led, he made his preplanned play of the jack. East had played the three, perhaps misguided, and there was an excellent chance that West would continue spades. Then South could win, play a third spade and establish his eighth trick before the defense could score any club tricks. There were two flaws. North's actual response was an overbid of three no-trump rather than an accurate raise to two no-trump. That meant the contract was doomed, and the only issue was whether it would be defeated by one trick or two.

The second flaw was that West paid no attention to the spade jack and shifted instantly to the club jack. That was the end of Friedberg. He could make only seven tricks. It is possible, of course, that West gave South credit for brilliance. In that case, Friedberg missed the opportunity to quote the Lord Chancellor in "Iolanthe":

But though the compliment implied inflates me with legitimate pride,

It nevertheless can't be denied
That it has its inconvenient side.

NORTH
♠ 8 7 4
♥ K 8 4
♦ A Q 10 8
♣ 7 6 3

WEST
♠ K Q 10 8
♥ A 10 9
♦ 8 3
♣ J 10 8 3

EAST
♠ 5 2
♥ Q J 8 2
♦ 9 7 5 4
♣ K Q 8

SOUTH (D)
♠ A J 9 5
♥ Q 7 8
♦ K J 2
♣ A 5 4

Neither side was vulnerable. The bidding:
South: West North East
1NT Pass 2NT Pass
Pass Pass

West led the spade king.

DO YOU LIVE IN FRANCE?

• Subscribe and SAVE up to 60% off the cover price.

• Also available: PAY MONTHLY by easy, low cost, direct debit.

EARLY MORNING DELIVERY TO YOUR HOME OR OFFICE.

A cosmopolitan, comprehensive and concise newspaper delivered every day to your home or office. In and around most of Paris and Lyon the International Herald Tribune offers early morning hand delivery on the day of publication, Monday through Saturday. And, because it is printed in Paris, Toulouse and Marseille, it can be sent by post to arrive on the same day in most of France at no extra cost.

The result?

Unique coverage of the world you live in, brought to you as it changes — daily.

For more information about easy ordering and availability of hand delivery

CALL our Subscriber Customer Service Department:

TOLL FREE: 00800 4 448 7827 (00800 4 IHT SUBS)

or Fax 01 41 43 92 10

E-mail: subs@iht.com — Internet: http://www.iht.com

PAYMENT BY MONTHLY DIRECT DEBIT

☐ YES, I'd like to subscribe and have my bank account debited monthly by FF162. Please start my subscription and send me a bank form to arrange my payment.

Family Name: _____
First Name: _____
Job Title: _____
Mailing Address: ☐ Home ☐ Business

PAYMENT BY CHECK OR CREDIT CARD

☐ YES, I'd like to subscribe and pay for the following term:

☐ 12 months (+ 2 months free): FF1,950 (Savings off cover price: 46%)
☐ Special 2-month trial subscription: FF210 (Savings off cover price: 60%)

☐ My check is enclosed (payable to the IHT)

☐ Please charge my:
☐ Access ☐ Amex ☐ Diners
☐ Eurocard ☐ MasterCard ☐ Visa
Credit card charges will be made in French Francs at current exchange rates.

Card No. _____ Exp. _____

Signature: _____

☐ Please start delivery and send invoice.

City: _____
Postal Code: _____
Telephone: _____
E-Mail Address: _____
Your VAT No (Business orders only)

(IHT VAT No 747 320 211 26)
I got this copy of the IHT at: ☐ kiosk ☐ hotel ☐ airline ☐ other
☐ I do not wish to receive information from other carefully screened companies.

This offer expires on December 31, 1998 and is AVAILABLE FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS ONLY.

Return your completed coupon to:
Subscriptions Director, International Herald Tribune,
181, Avenue Charles-de-Gaulle, 92521 Neuilly Cedex.
Fax 01 41 43 92 10 E-Mail: subs@iht.com FR14

READERS IN OTHER COUNTRIES CAN SUBSCRIBE BY CALLING:

EUROPE, MIDDLE EAST & AFRICA THE AMERICAS ASIA
Tel: +33 1 41 43 93 61 Tel: (USA toll free) 1-800-882-2884 Tel: +852 29 22 11 71
Fax: +33 1 41 43 92 10 Fax: +1 212 755 8785 Fax: +852 29 22 11 99

INTERNATIONAL

Dissident And Burma Junta Face Off Again

Agence France-Presse

RANGOON — The Burmese opposition leader Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and the country's junta faced off again Thursday before the 10th anniversary Saturday of a military crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators that left thousands dead, officials from her party said.

The latest confrontation occurred when the Nobel peace laureate ordered junta security guards to leave her compound and they refused, National League for Democracy officials said.

It came as reports of protests, detentions and security clampdowns swirled through Rangoon, but the streets remained calm, residents and foreign diplomats said.

The authorities said that an anti-government protest took place in one town and said an opposition member had been summoned to a police station in another for distributing "certain papers."

Meanwhile, the human rights watchdog Amnesty International said the international community had let down the people of Burma through its inaction and needed to refocus efforts on bringing change to the poverty-stricken country.

"For all the statements, for all the sanctions, for all the promises of engagement-producing results, things have only got worse," the organization said in a statement.

"Genuine concerted action by the international community could turn this situation around," the London-based rights group said.

Party officials said Daw Aung San Suu Kyi wrote to authorities July 31 to demand the security team's withdrawal after she was forcibly taken back to Rangoon following a six-day roadside stand-off with the authorities 26 kilometers (15 miles) northwest of the city.

That confrontation was sparked when she was blocked from traveling to meet supporters in the provinces, her third failed attempt in three weeks.

She is said by aides to be recuperating and has not been seen in public since returning to the capital.

No other incidents were reported in Rangoon as activists prepared to mark the anniversary Saturday, but foreign diplomats and residents said the city was awash with speculation about the next step in the confrontation between the junta and the pro-democracy party.

A Burmese student protesting Thursday at Rangoon's embassy in Bangkok.

Boston Globe Writer Told to Quit

By Howard Kurtz
Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — The Boston Globe demanded the resignation of a controversial columnist, Mike Barnicle, Wednesday night after concluding that he had stolen one-liners from the comedian George Carlin and then misled the paper about the matter.

The Globe suspended Barnicle for one month without pay after learning that he had used a series of one-liners in his Sunday column that had been lifted from Mr. Carlin's best-selling 1997 book, "Brain Droppings."

But Matthew Storr, editor of the paper, asked the 25-year veteran to leave the paper after learning that Mr. Barnicle, who asserted he had not read Mr. Carlin's book, had, in fact, held the book in his hand and recommended it on Boston's WCVB television.

Mr. Barnicle refused to resign and a Globe spokesman would not say whether he was about to be dismissed.

"In the past few days, and particularly the past few hours, his relationship with his readers and his employers had become untenable," Mr. Storr said in a statement. "It is clear he misrepresented himself either to his television audience or to his editors. This contradiction is unacceptable."

Earlier on Wednesday, before the punishment was decided, Mr. Barnicle said in an interview that a bartender had given him the jokes and that he did not know they came from the Carlin book.

The Barnicle bombshell comes six weeks after another Globe columnist, Patricia Smith, was forced to resign when she admitted she had fabricated all or part of four columns.

BRIEFLY

Anglican Bishops Voice Support For Jerusalem as Dual Capital

LONDON — Anglican bishops said Thursday that Jerusalem should be a capital city for both Israel and an independent Palestinian state.

At their once-a-decade Lambeth conference, the 750 bishops from around the world voted overwhelmingly in favor of a resolution that Jews, Muslims and Christians should have free access to Jerusalem.

Israel occupied East Jerusalem in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war and later annexed it, vowing that the united city would remain its "eternal and indivisible" capital.

Palestinians want East Jerusalem to be the capital of their future state. (Reuters)

"new beginning" in ties between the two countries after "years of mistrust." (Reuters)

Saudi-Yemeni Border Accord

RIYADH — A Saudi-Yemeni military committee in Riyadh has reached a series of agreements to prevent clashes over disputed borders, the official SPA agency said Thursday.

A statement from the committee said the two sides had agreed on "guarantees and rules," without elaborating.

The meeting followed an accord that was signed last month by the two countries' foreign ministers after clashes erupted between Saudi and Yemeni forces over the disputed Red Sea island of Duwaima on July 19. Three Yemeni coast guardsmen were killed.

The borders have never been fully demarcated. (AFP)

Colombia to Get New President

BOGOTA — President-elect Andres Pastrana will take office on Friday but with his peace hopes already tested by a bloody Marxist rebel offensive this week that left more than 130 people dead across Colombia.

The Harvard-educated Mr. Pastrana, a free marketer favored by the business classes, vowed to lead the nation down the path of peace after three decades of civil strife.

He also wants to overhaul the image of Colombia, branded an international drug pariah after the outgoing president, Ernesto Samper, allegedly bankrolled his 1994 election campaign with a $6 million donation from the Cali drug mob.

One bright spot for Mr. Pastrana is an apparent opening for improved U.S.-Colombian relations.

He met President Bill Clinton this week and announced a

Ecuador Rushing Quake Aid

QUITO — Military planes have begun flying food and clothing to hundreds of refugees on Ecuador's Pacific coast after two earthquakes toppled buildings, killing three people.

President Fabian Alarcon ordered rescue workers in the coastal province of Manabi to prepare safe areas in schools and hospitals in case of new tremors.

The quakes struck Tuesday near the resort town of Bahia de Caraquez, southwest of Quito, causing 200 houses and buildings to collapse.

Fearing further tremors, hundreds of residents of towns in Manabi spent the night on soccer fields or in parks, many sleeping under tarpaulins that they had fashioned into shelters. (AP)

Passersby in Bahia de Caraquez, Ecuador, inspecting one of about 200 buildings destroyed by earthquakes.

AUTOS: Analysts See Trouble for Carmakers in U.S. and Europe

Continued from Page 1

Other automakers are expected to expedite negotiations on mergers and alliances to an industry struggling with overcapacity. In the past week, such leading German industrialists as Mr. Pischetsrieder and Ferdinand Piech, the chief executive of Volkswagen, have talked out loud about a merger.

Some industry experts reckon that Mr. Piech used the BMW merger suggestion as a ruse to distract from VW's costly setback in buying Rolls-Royce Motor Cars and then losing the rights to the coveted Rolls-Royce name to BMW, which paid nothing but lawyers' fees.

The flurry of speculation regarding possible merger configurations reminded one Frankfurt analyst of "international chess." Chrysler's chairman, Bob Eaton, recently said he knew of at least six other sets of merger negotiations within the world auto industry.

The French carmakers Renault and Peugeot-Citroen have been mentioned by matchmakers. Since both are national industry champions, talk of strategic partners for either raises difficult political issues in France, suggesting to some that they might consider joining forces.

One German analyst spoke of a "Mediterranean solution" in which Fiat could align itself with Renault. VW also has come into play, analysts speculate, with an interest in buying Renault's loss-making truck operations.

With a recession in Japan, home to 11 carmakers, some think a global consolidation eventually could include names like Nissan and Mitsubishi. Some analysts have mentioned the possibility of BMW merging with Honda.

Mr. Halver of Delbrueck & Co. estimates that in 10 years, as few as 10 of the world's 18 automakers will be left.

Daimler and Chrysler on Thursday disclosed the first concrete details of the merger, including a raft of numbers that neither company would have disclosed unless Germany's securities regulators had demanded them. The numbers, which include the earnings projections for both companies through the year 2000, show Daimler's earnings rising at a significantly faster clip than Chrysler's.

According to the companies, Daimler's pretax earnings will rise to $6.2 billion in 2000 from $2 billion last year. By contrast, Chrysler forecasts a sharp jump, to $5.6 billion this year from $4.56 billion last year, but then expects to see smaller increases after that to $6.2 billion next year and $6.3 billion in 2000.

The figures helped justify the imbalance in the proposed share swap that cements the merger, with Daimler shareholders holding the better cards. They can trade a Daimler share for one in the new company at a 1-1 ratio, but a Chrysler shareholder would receive 0.6235 of a Daimler-Chrysler share.

Analysts and industry officials had differing opinions about when automakers should be looking for partners.

"It does not really matter where the cycle is," said one industry official of the Daimler-Chrysler deal. "In terms of the deal, it was the best timing ever."

Mr. Pischetsrieder of BMW suggested that anyone prowling for an acquisition would be better off waiting for the downturn. "In boom times everyone thinks it is time to buy," he told a German newspaper last week. "But that is the wrong time. The correct time is much more during a crisis." Asked when the next crisis is coming, Mr. Pischetsrieder said in the next two years. "First in the U.S.A.," he said. "If we are lucky, it will not hit Europe before 2000."

Chrysler to Build Mercedes Cars

Chrysler plans to begin building Mercedes-Benz sport-utility vehicles at an Austrian factory, The New York Times reported from Traverse City, Michigan.

The announcement provided some of the first details of possible savings from Chrysler's planned merger this autumn with Daimler-Benz AG.

The combined company, Daimler-Chrysler AG, will also have ordinary shares that will be traded in New York, Germany and elsewhere with equal ease, said Thomas Stalkamp, the Chrysler president. Executives considered and rejected the more common approach of allowing trading in the United States of American depositary receipts, which represent claims on shares quoted on foreign stock exchanges.

Mr. Stalkamp said Wednesday that Chrysler planned to add a third shift as soon as possible at a factory complex in Graz, Austria, to produce Mercedes sport-utility vehicles there. Chrysler already builds 50,000 Jeep Grand Cherokees a year and 50,000 Voyager minivans a year at the factory.

You're looking at one of the most powerful spaces in the world

As a reader, you appreciate the editorial quality of our titles.

As an advertiser, you need to know that no one puts more decision-making power within your reach, on a worldwide basis, than we do.

Our columns are read by more of those who make the most far-reaching buying decisions than any other media on earth.

No wonder so many serious corporate players make our titles the lead media in their global communications planning.

The World Press Group is an alliance of seven prestigious publications committed to promoting the power of international press. For more information, please make contact at any point below:

BusinessWeek

The Economist

EUROPEAN

FORTUNE

Herald Tribune

Newsweek

TIME

World Press Group

(US) 44 (3) 161 640 5882 (Fax) 44 (3) 161 932 7496 (e mail) worldpressgroup@compuserve.com http://www.worldpressgroup.com

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1 "Speed"

4 Mimeographs,

18 "Come — My

16 Woodstock

17 Assembly-line

18 Former Gov.

20 Bluebeard's

21 Pompastic

22 Storm

23 Stomach

24 Stomach

25 Stomach

26 Stomach

27 Stomach

28 Stomach

29 Stomach

30 Stomach

31 Stomach

32 Stomach

33 Stomach

34 Stomach

35 Stomach

36 Stomach

37 Stomach

38 Stomach

39 Stomach

40 Stomach

29 Five and ten,

30 Not neurotic

31 One, for one

32 Sue Grafton's

33 "For

34 Causes of many

35 Opposite of

36 Used a

37 Legendary

38 Projecting parts

39 Best

40 Last team

41 Last team

42 Last team

43 Last team

44 Last team

45 Last team

46 Last team

47 Last team

48 Last team

49 Last team

50 Last team

51 Last team

52 Last team

53 Last team

54 Last team

55 Last team

56 Last team

57 Heraldic wreath

58 1960's CBS

59 detective drama

60 One way to

61 Free

62 Deleterious

63 Unfit of a legion

64 Jeter's nemesis,

65 In film

66 Inventory

67 "Nadia"

68 actress

69 Löwenstern

70 Quadrant, say

71 Part of ancient

72 Grace with the

73 city Megalopolis

74 Flocking (around)

75 Cal material

76 Yeats heroine

77 French sun

78 Puerto

79 Chile

80 Square, in a way

81 TrBeCa

82 neighbor

83 Base address

84 Concert ending

85 — Pablo, Calif.

86 Certain jet

87 Suffix with press

14 Tabasco

15 Going nowhere

16 Went nowhere

17 Some Papal

18 Chronicler

19 Unit of a legion

20 Jeter's nemesis,

21 In film

22 Inventory

23 "Nadia"

24 actress

25 Löwenstern

26 Quadrant, say

27 Part of ancient

28 Grace with the

29 city Megalopolis

30 Flocking (around)

31 Cal material

32 Yeats heroine

33 French sun

34 Puerto

35 Chile

36 Square, in a way

37 TrBeCa

38 neighbor

39 Base address

40 Concert ending

41 — Pablo, Calif.

42 Certain jet

43 Suffix with press

© New York Times/Edited by Will Shortz.

INTERNATIONAL FUNDS LISTING

Track the performance of over 2,400

international funds, every day, on the IHT site on the World Wide Web.

http://www.ihf.com

Leisure

Landlocked Laos Awakens to Tourism

Friendliness Amidst the Temples

By Martha Stevenson Olson

VIENTIANE, Laos — Vientiane, the sleepy capital of half-forgotten, landlocked, xenophobic Laos, is beginning to awaken to the possibilities of tourism.

Until this spring, just getting a tourist visa was a chore requiring considerable time and money. Now, visitors from many countries are issued 15-day tourist visas for $50 upon arrival at Wattay Airport in Vientiane or at the Friendship Bridge — the only bridge across the mighty Mekong River south of China — which links Laos to the Thai town of Nong Khai. Those already with visas can choose from at least five other passages, overland or on the river, into the country.

There are other signs of reaching out: The government has designated 1999 as Visit Laos Year, with a corresponding frenzy that is tearing up streets in Vientiane — which has a population of 133,000 — and installing drainage and other infrastructure. A modern airport, incorporating stylish Lao lines, will soon replace drab Wattay, which practically shouts "Third World."

Those who cherish the old Laos need not worry, however. Despite a stream of rush-hour motorcycle traffic and taxi drivers who are just learning to be greedy (there are still fewer cars here than most anywhere else in Asia), Vientiane — and certainly the rest of undeveloped rural Laos — retains its fresh, open face and charm. I met with only friendliness and politeness during my weeklong visit in May, hardly what one would expect considering the U.S. forces' bombardment during the Vietnam War.

Historically, Laos has been weak, and through the years has been bullied by powers as near as Thailand and Burma and as far away as Paris and Washington. Even its name is a bit second-hand — the handful of Lao kingdoms were collectively called les Laos by the 19th-century French colonizers, and the name has stuck. Although the official name is the Lao People's Democratic Republic, the population refers to itself and the country as Laos.

The French expanded their influence in the region at the end of the 19th century, signing a series of treaties with the Siamese, British and Chinese. During World War II, the French were replaced by the Japanese. After the war, the Lao independence movement gained momentum, and in 1953 France granted Laos its sovereignty.

With backing from the Viet Minh, the Lao Communists gained support through the 1950s and '60s and during the American engagement in Indochina, until finally, in 1975, the Pathet Lao took over in a bloodless coup and established the Lao People's Democratic Republic.

Nowadays, there is a large presence of international aid organizations, since Laos is one of the least-developed Southeast Asian countries. In Vientiane, numerous white four-wheel-drive vehicles from these agencies can be seen bouncing through the mud and potholes. And many businesses, most notably restaurants, have been established by European expatriates.

It is the wide Mekong River and its tributaries — crucial transportation arteries — that provide life support for Vientiane and much of the rest of the country.

The oldest parts of the capital are nearest the river. The area closest to it, next to Fa Ngum Road (a major thoroughfare being repaved and widened), is a rural patchwork of vegetable plots dotted with water buffalo, awaiting the periodic floods that will submerge it. Nearby are Buddhist temples tucked among French colonial buildings set on wide avenues, while boxy government offices and modern hotels are farther from the town center. As yet Vientiane boasts no tall buildings; the highest, a few new hotels, are at most five stories.

BARGAIN HOTELS

As tourism in Laos increases, investors are hurrying to build high-end lodgings in Vientiane, and some well-worn hotels that were once top-rated now are quoting bargain rates to fill their rooms. The hotel where I stayed, the Asian Pavilion, was once one of Vientiane's better business-class hotels, and it still offers amenities like faxes and e-mail, a good restaurant and helpful desk service. The rooms are a bit musty and faded, and some have windows that face walls. But it's a good value over all. I paid about $22 a night for a double room, including a buffet breakfast.

Traffic on a street in Vientiane, where there are the fewest cars in Southeast Asia; the Patuxai, a Laotian version of the Arc de Triomphe.

On the day I began sightseeing in May, which happened to be a Tuesday, the temples highlighted in my Lonely Planet guidebook (the first and still the best guidebook for Laos) were closed. Instead I made a pilgrimage to Wat Si Muang, the temple dedicated to the city itself. Howler monkeys in a boarded house greeted my arrival. Monks draped in saffron robes did odd jobs around the place. Like almost all Vientiane temples, Wat Si Muang was destroyed by the occupying Siamese in the 1820s and was only rebuilt in 1915.

Consequently, Vientiane does not have the number of ancient temples that enrich Thailand and Cambodia.

Wat Si Muang teems toward a certain garishness, with brightly painted statues of demons guarding its entrance. The temple has two sections, with the cloth-draped stone pillar embodying the city's guardian spirit at the rear. A bronze statue of King Sisavang Vong, nominal ruler under the French and Japanese occupations, dominates a little park in front of the temple, where two of the city's main thoroughfares, Sathathit and Samsenthai Roads, merge.

I did eventually make my way to the more notable temples, like Haw Pha Kaew, a 1565 temple that was rebuilt between 1936 and 1942 and has now been turned into a museum. Ancient Buddha sculptures — some serene, some almost laughing — line the encircling terrace, their eyes seemingly peering from the blank spaces from which gems have been pried. In addition to these and the numerous interesting sculptures inside, the temple (that is to say, the original) has the added cachet of having once housed the so-called Emerald Buddha, now in Wat Phra Kaew in the royal compound in Bangkok. During the 16th to 18th centuries it was the focus of much intrigue and skirmishing with the Thais.

SURVIVING TEMPLE Next door the presidential palace dominates a fenced-off greensward, and across the street is Wat Si Saket, the only Vientiane temple not razed by the Siamese during the 1828 destruction, possibly because in style it is very Siamese. Built in 1818, it is not old by Asian standards, but it does have an interesting cloister sheltering literally thousands of Buddha images in various shapes and positions, many of them tiny figurines tucked into the hundreds of niches that dot the walls.

Inside the small temple, with its poignant painted murals, are more Buddha images and more niches. According to a posted note on the cloister, the temple's curator has counted 10,136 Buddha images in the temple complex.

Possibly the most venerated spot in Vientiane is Pha That Luang, a gold-colored chedi — a holy site in the shape of an overturned bowl — with an elongated spire that is said to contain a relic of the Buddha, and may date as a holy site to as early as the third century B.C. It, too, was damaged by pillaging neighbors and was abandoned for almost a century. It has been restored twice, once in 1900 and once again in the 1930s. Climbing the steps' several staircases and walking around the two terraces imparts, if not a holy feeling, then at least the calm that comes from surveying a lovely scene below, with the cloister that encloses the chedi, and two classic Buddhist temples, Wat That Luang Neua, and Wat That Luang Tai, flanking the steps north and south. This stupa is a pilgrimage site for Laotians and Buddhists from across Asia, and visiting monks often can be seen climbing the edifice in their orange robes.

The last night, I dined at the Soukviang restaurant. Here I had thickfleshed fish from the Mekong, cooked and chopped up with fistfuls of garlic and chili peppers, paired with sticky rice from a woven rattan container, and wrapped up in savory leaves like basil and anguria. The flavors were strong and bracing, evocative of big mountains and deep rivers. I washed it all down with a bottle of Beer Lao, the national brand.

At other places in Vientiane I had eaten shrimp cocktail, duck à l'orange, and profiteroles. But here were the flavors and smells I would remember as the real Laos.

Martha Stevenson Olson, who writes frequently about Southeast Asia, wrote this for The New York Times.

Tracking Orangutans, Turtles and Clouds in Borneo's Wilds

By Donna Marchetti

KOTA KINABALU, Borneo — "Just don't look up and talk at the same time," suggested Walter, our guide. As we entered the cave it quickly became apparent why.

The ground was covered with a thick carpet of spongy guano, a dead giveaway of the thousands of bats hanging from the dimly lit ceiling. Flying rapidly in and out of the cave's entrance were tiny swiftlets whose nests bring high prices as the main ingredient for bird's nest soup.

I pointed my flashlight into a corner and saw that the reddish surface appeared to be moving. What I was seeing wasn't the cave wall but a mass of the giant cockroaches that breed in the guano. As my eyes adjusted to the dark, I began to see them everywhere — on the railings, crawling on the walkway, squirming on the ground. Among them, Walter warned, were probably poisonous centipedes. Sure enough, as we were leaving the cave a half-hour later, two small boys — perhaps children of the men harvesting the bird's nests — held up a dead centipede for our inspection.

I was in the larger of the Gomantong Caves in the Malaysian state of Sabah in the northeast corner of the island of Borneo. Though I had come to Borneo in March primarily to scuba dive, I decided to spend a week touring the parks and natural attractions in the area first.

The third largest island in the world, after Greenland and New Guinea, the 287,000-square-mile (720,000 square-kilometer) Borneo is shared by three countries: Indonesia, the tiny Sultanate of Brunei and Malaysia, with the largest part in Indonesia. Sabah, one of two Malaysian states on Borneo, has an extensive system of parks that offer the nature-oriented traveler a wealth of experiences, including the chance to observe plants and animals that are rare or exist nowhere else.

Known for venomous snakes, prodigious leeches and insects of legendary proportions, Borneo possesses the stuff of nightmares. I was therefore fully braced for the writhing borde on the cave walls, and whatever else awaited at the next attraction. But I was pleasantly surprised. For though I saw an abundance of wildlife, I never encountered anything more dangerous than the dead centipede dangling before my eyes.

After leaving the Gomantong Forest Reserve, where the caves are, our group of six was driven to our lodgings on the banks of the Kinabatangan River in the village of Sukau. That afternoon, we boarded a small motorboat and headed for one of the Kinabatangan's tributaries, hoping to see rare proboscis monkeys that live in the area.

This shy species is endemic to Borneo, where it lives in lowland forests and swampy areas. Its distinguishing feature is its long droopy nose, more prominent in males than females.

MONKEY FACES The setting sun was still bright, making it difficult to see into the tangle of forest, though curious macaques came right to the river's edge. A hornbill streaked across the sky in front of us, releasing a resonant honk. We floated gently past a monitor lizard lazing on a branch. As the light faded under the thick forest cover, what began as the low drone of cicadas accelerated to a roar that was nearly deafening. Conversations were futile, but I saw by Walter's gesture that he wanted us to look into the adjacent jungle.

There, hidden among the trees, were the red-dish-brown faces of the monkeys. A male made his way slowly toward the river, then scampered across a branch to the other side. This was apparently a signal for all to follow, and for the next few minutes we watched, fascinated, as a parade of monkeys crossed over just ahead of us, silhouetted against the deepening sunset.

We departed early the next morning for a four-and-a-half drive to Sandakan, where we boarded a ferry to Pulau Selangan in Turtle Islands National Park. In the Sulu Sea, about 25 miles north of Sandakan. Though all three islands can be visited, Pulau Selangan is the only one that can accommodate overnight guests.

Green and hawksbill turtles come ashore at night to lay their eggs, which the park rangers remove to a protected area until hatching. At about 8 P.M., we were summoned to the beach where, by the light of a lantern, we watched as a green turtle slowly and laboriously laid her eggs.

Her name was Maria, we learned. She had come ashore before and been tagged. Over an hour's time, Maria deposited 109 eggs in the sandy nest about three feet from where we stood.

We were to have another special event that evening: Five eggs from another nest had hatched while we were watching Maria. The tiny turtles were exercising their instincts, paddling the air furiously as we held them between our fingers. Under the watchful eyes of the park rangers, we carefully carried them to the beach and watched them make their way determinedly into the sea.

The next day, we made the 90-minute ferry ride back to Sandakan, where we were met and driven just outside of town to the Sepilok Orang Utan Rehabilitation Center.

The orangutan, the original "wild man of Borneo," gets its name from the Malay words for "man" (orang) and "jungle" (utan). Found in the wild only on Borneo and the Indonesian island of Sumatra, the orangutan is fighting a battle for survival as its habitat shrinks.

At the rehabilitation center, orangutans that have been orphaned, kept illegally or abused by farm workers are taught survival skills and gradually acclimated to life in their natural habitat.

We arrived at the feeding platform a little before the 10 A.M. meal and waited with 30 or so other tourists. The animals, most of them slightly smaller than an adult human, were already beginning to gather, some swinging through the trees, others strolling casually up the walkway, where surprised visitors cleared a way for them.

The adults, with their luxuriant orange-brown fur, were all females, we were told. Some of them carried infants on their heads; like babies everywhere, they were squirming and eager to explore. Though we were asked not to touch the apes, they seemed quite willing to be close to humans and unfazed by excited children and snapping cameras.

MILK AND BANANAS

While most wandered onto the platform for their purposely boring meal of milk and bananas (to encourage independent foraging), some stayed among us. One solemn-looking adolescent was missing an arm, the victim, we were told, of enraged farm workers who found her searching for food on their plantation. Walter had warned us that orangutans can sometimes be aggressive, snatching purses or even articles of clothing, but there were no tricksters among us. It was easy to feel sympathy for these animals with their expressive faces and gentle manner.

I flew from Sandakan to Sabah's capital, the modern, teeming city of Kota Kinabalu, which was my base between excursions. The city, about 140 miles across the province, on its west coast, was hot and crowded, and I wasn't disappointed that I had no time to explore, but the Hotel Shangri-la offered a comfortable place to rest.

It was a two-hour drive northeast to Kinabalu Park, where I planned to spend two days hiking and exploring with my guide, Mr. Liang.

Another half-hour beyond the main entrance was Poring Hot Springs.

Our first stop was the canopy walk, a narrow wood-and-rope system of walkways suspended high above the forest floor. Though it took a few minutes to get used to the bouncing walkway, we were rewarded by a bird's-eye view of the forest.

The hot springs, developed by the Japanese during World War II, consist of steaming sulfurous water that is channeled into tubs of various sizes. The tubs are equipped with faucets for both hot and cold-water, allowing visitors to control the temperature.

The next morning, Mr. Liang and I began our hike in the main section of the park. At an elevation of about 5,000 feet, this area is much cooler than the steamy lowlands I'd been traveling in, and the air was invigorating.

The focal point of the park is 13,455-foot Mount Kinabalu, the highest mountain between the Himalayas and New Guinea.

From the trailhead at 6,000 feet, we hiked about halfway to the summit. The trail led us from tropical rain forest to oak forest, and finally to the cloud forest, where dwarf rhododendrons and gnarled tea trees looked surrealistic in the swirling vapor of the clouds surrounding us.

By the time we reached our turnaround, each step required arduous effort in the thin air, and it was a relief to begin the descent. Nine hours after we had begun, we arrived at the trailhead where we started that morning.

Donna Marchetti, author of "Around the Shores of Lake Erie," wrote this for The New York Times.

DINING

Shades of Lyon in a Paris Bistro

By Patricia Wells
International Herald Tribune

PARIS — Francoise Petit promised herself four things: She would never marry a chef; she would never own a restaurant; she would never live in Paris, and she would never have a daughter who was a Virgo.

Well, now the 34-year-old Francoise Constantin has all four, and she is as giddy as a schoolgirl.

At the age of 17, she began working as a waitress at the quintessential Lyonais bistro Café des Fédérations. During her 13 years there she and her patron, Raymond Fulchiron, became minor celebrities in the food world, as gastronomes came from far and near to hear their banter and chow down on saucissons chauds, andouillettes, blanquette de veau and platters of weeping Saint-Marcellin cheese, all washed down with rumbler of sturdy Morgon.

In 1994 Francoise left Lyon for Paris and promptly broke her three other promises. Since April she and her husband, the chef Daniel Constantin, have been happily installed at the Auberge Pyrenees-Cevennes, the classic Parisian bistro that was also known as Chez Philippe and run by Philippe Sebourc until his death last year. With hams and sausages hanging from the rafters, colorful old tile floors and rustic stone walls, the bistro remains thankfully unchanged.

And while the Constantins have maintained many of the old standbys — platters of sausages and cured meats and cassoulet — they have also added such Lyonais classics as robust green salads loaded with top-quality cured bacon; a rich and densely flavored pork sausage, and those Saint-Marcellin cow's milk cheeses from Mere Richard in Lyon.

Chef Constantin, who has been at the stove since the age of 14, is a classic French cook — a dying breed of those who have French cooking in their very veins, and it shows in everything that comes from his spotless kitchen.

The food has soul, character and an honesty one rarely sees today in simple bistro fare. The chef's battery of sturdy copper pots that he brought from the Eiffel Tower after working there for a decade attest to his determination and respect for French cuisine.

"You can't make a Bearnaise in stainless steel," he likes to say.

Daily specials here might include thick slices of exquisitely flavored saddle of lamb seared on an ancient gas grill; a rich and creamy potato gratin; and an impeccably prepared plate of sautéed grolles mushrooms.

The 43-year-old chef's motto is: "It is simple to do, but difficult to succeed at."

Wines all come from small producers and have been selected by Francoise. Try the silky, levraies cru Beaujolais Domaine du Clocher from Jean-Noël Melinard, or the fresh and fruity Coteaux du Lyonnais, available by the glass or the traditional Lyonnais pot.

Auberge Pyrenees-Cevennes, 106, rue de la Folie-Méricourt, Paris 11; tel. 01-43-37-33-78. Closed Saturday lunch and Sunday. Credit card: Visa, 148-franc ($25) menu. A la carte, 160 to 210 francs.

LEISURE

Help for Fearful Fliers (You're Not Alone)

By Susan Keselenko Coll

WASHINGTON—Dan Bloom, a 49-year-old American living in Taiwan, has been afraid to fly since the engine of a DC-3 prop plane he was on in Alaska caught fire about 15 years ago. Nevertheless, when Bloom fell in love with a Japanese woman, he gave himself a pep talk, swallowed four Valium tablets, and boarded a plane to Tokyo.

Bloom says his original intention was to leave the country after 90 days in order to obtain a work permit, but when the time came, he could not bring himself to fly again. He had just found a job, he adds, and could not take the time off to travel to Korea or Taiwan by boat. When his medical appeal was denied by the immigration authorities, he chose to become an illegal alien rather than get on another airplane, a status that, five years later, won him a 41-day jail sentence followed by a police escort in handcuffs back to the dreaded airplane.

While the particular circumstances of Bloom's story are extreme, his decision to risk criminal prosecution rather than get on an airplane is a situation that some 25 million Americans can probably relate to.

Aviophobia—often used interchangeably with aerophobia, which technically speaking, means an abnormal fear of air or drafts—can range in severity from the sort of in-flight jitters eased by a glass of wine or a tranquilizer to terrifying panic attacks.

A former navy pilot who did not wish to be identified says that when he suffered an adrenaline rush ac-complicated by sweaty palms and a racing heart on a commercial airliner three months ago, his biggest concern was not death, but rather, "am I going to make a total fool out of myself?"

David Golding/STY

The approaches to dealing with the phobia are as varied as the symptoms. A handful of home-study courses aim to demystify the flying experience by saturating participants with the often arcane details of aerodynamics. Private counseling sessions with psychiatrists attempt to get at the root of the problem, which often tends to have more to do with issues of loss of control rather than with airplanes, per se. And group seminars, held at major airports or airport hotels, literally walk participants through the process of flying.

David Linsley, a retired United Airlines pilot who has established a cottage industry aimed at turning "snails into eagles," estimates that the airline industry loses close to $8 billion a year in potential ticket sales because of fear of flying.

Linsley's Pegasus Fear of Flying Foundation Inc. offers a variety of self-help options ranging from a kit which comes with a book, audio and videotape that retails for $69.95, to corporate training sessions that cost as much as $5,000 per day.

Similarly, the Institute for Psychology of Air Travel offers a program that includes an audio tape that talks one through a short flight from Portland, Maine, to Boston, explaining at every juncture what the pilot is doing, and coaching nervous passengers through a regime of breathing exercises.

BEYOND SAFETY CONCERNS For many fearful passengers, however, a lack of understanding of the relative safety of air travel is not the problem. Indeed, many a phobic can rattle off the statistics: Flying is considered to be 100 times safer than driving a car; the probability of being killed in an airplane crash is one in 11 million while flying domestically; one in 44 million flying internationally; one in a major carrier, and a four-engine jet can land safely on just one engine, according to a statistical Web site devoted to aviophobics:

www.afraid2fly.com/statisticalspeaking.html. "Education is very important," said Robert DuPont, a clinical professor of Psychiatry at Georgetown Medical School whose book, "The Anxiety Cure," will be published later this summer.

But sometimes the problems have less to do with a lack of knowledge than with simple biology. "The problem is a short circuit in the nervous system," DuPont said, "a thunderstorm in the brain."

The only thing to do for those who suffer from anxiety, he said, is to fly "over and over again." DuPont also cites the value of such medications as Valium and Zanax even after a patient has been through counseling.

Albert Forgiore, founder of the Institute for Psychology of Air Travel, believes that the largest problem facing passengers is their fear of not being in control.

Certainly otherwise inexplicable midflight anxiety attacks are simply a reflection of harried modern society, he says.

"A person gradually gets used to a very stressed lifestyle," he explains. "They get on an airplane in a highly tense state, not aware they've adapted to it. You get some turbulence or the plane has to circle, and boom—they have an anxiety attack."

Such was the case with the former navy pilot. Although he had logged more than 2,000 hours at the controls himself, he had what he describes as a panic attack at 35,000 feet somewhere between Baltimore and Jacksonville, and has been unable to fly without the help of medication since.

"I know intellectually that nothing is going to happen. I'm not going to die. The plane is going to land. But you can't tell your body that," he said.

For further and international information, contact the Institute for Psychology of Air Travel: www.iaa-online.com/inspsyair/tabe.htm

Susan Keselenko Coll is a Washington-based writer.

MOVIE GUIDE

Richard Symmes/Sony Pictures

James Urbaniak (left) and Thomas Jay Ryan in "Henry Fool."

HENRY FOOL

Directed by Hal Hartley. U.S.

In "Henry Fool," the fascinating and often infuriating new film from the idiosyncratic Hal Hartley, the title character spends an awful lot of time yammering about the difference between poetry and pornography, as though there were some thin, indefinable line between these things. And maybe there is. Maybe, at their extremes, beauty and ugliness no longer are at odds but actually begin to converge. In a similar way, the movie is a paradox, a bundle of contradictions, many of them lyrical, more of them utterly frustrating.

Set in the home and squalid basement rental unit of the working-class Grim family, "Henry Fool" has the grimy look of cinema verité. Faulknerian in their wretchedness, the Grim clan consists of mother Mary (Maria Porter), shuffling around in a housecoat and doped-up haze of prescription medication; daughter Fay (Parker Posey), a foul-mouthed, chain-smoking nymphomaniac; and son Simon (James Urbaniak), a painfully shy garbage man who speaks, on the rare occasions when he opens his mouth, in the abortive cadence of a stalled automobile. Into this domestic gruel steps a drifter with the Dickensian name of Henry Fool, played by the stage actor Thomas Jay Ryan. When the self-styled philosopher and intellectual with a shady past moves into the Grim's downstairs apartment, he carries not much more than a stack of dog-eared composition books filled with the confessional chicken scratches of his life story. Before long, the odd bird and aspiring writer has insinuated himself into their household in several expected—and unexpected—ways. Not only does he make love to mother and then daughter (isn't that de rigueur in this sort of scenario?), but he inspires the inarticulate Simon to take up pencil and paper himself. What should result but epic verse? Hartley is better and smarter than the Hollywood herd and is to be commended for grappling with the nature of art, creativity and friendship in "Henry Fool," but the price of admission to his elite club of admirers—the willingness to accept his inaccessibility—is a price that most people may be unwilling to pay.

(Michael O'Sullivan, WP)

LETHAL WEAPON 4
Directed by Richard Donner. U.S.
Coming attractions for "Lethal Weapon 4" boasted a chase sequence in which Mel Gibson is dragged behind a trailer truck on a crowded freeway. Brakes screech, drivers veer and vehicles go bang while Gibson endures this nightmare until Danny Glover manages to hoist him off the pavement at high speed. After this, the two stars crash straight through an office building in their runaway car. Pardon me for having groaned in anticipation of what, in the full perspective-warping heat of the summer movie season, turns out to be one of the nicer blow-'em-ups around. The characters remain funny and likable, and they all live on Earth. The formula still has some zip. Scenes unfold with that antediluvian, pre-MTV storytelling logic that some of us still find helpful, and the story actually has a few substantial ideas in mind. (It's pro-friends and family; it's anti-slavery.) These are real virtues even if only relative ones. After all, "Lethal Weapon 4" is still a film whose idea of high drama is watching a car get pushed in front of an oncoming train. It's also a flamboyant, tongue-in-cheek adventure fueled by jokey camaraderie and constant forward motion. Though it first emerged as one of the more recklessly violent of action franchises, the "Lethal Weapon" formula has come to seem substantial, beside newer and dopier action-adventures. The characters have aged well and the storytelling wisely made room for new blood. And for sheer madness, a furious long fight between Gibson and Jet Li extends the boundaries of bone-crunching for aging movie heroes everywhere. (Janet Maslin, NYT)

Pi
Directed by Darren Aronofsky. U.S.
You don't have to be a math whiz to appreciate the heady notions Darren Aronofsky tosses around in his homemade debut film "Pi." The movie, made for just $20,000, offers a harsh horror-comic variation on a familiar type, the paranoid wild-eyed genius who is so obsessed with proving a theory that he goes mad. Before he's finished experimenting on his home computer, Maximilian Cohen (Sean Gullette), the film's central character, has shaved his head in order to plug his computer into a specific area of his brain. If "Pi" suggests a zany spoof of the Frankenstein myth, the movie poses age-old questions about the relationships between genius and insanity, mathematics and numerology, mysticism and scientific truth. Such questions may have no clear-cut answers, but considering them forces you to contemplate what exactly is meant by the word intelligence. But as smart as it is, "Pi" is awfully hard to watch. Filmed with hand-held cameras in splotchy black-and-white and crudely edited, it has the style and attitude of a no-budget midnight movie. (Stephen Holden, NYT)

ARTS GUIDE

AUSTRIA

VIENNA
20er Haus, tel: (1) 799-8900, closed Mondays. Continuing/To Aug. 30: "Arte Povera From the Goetz Collection." Installations and sculptures by Italian artists of the mid-1960s who used simple materials such as sand, stone and newspaper.

BRITAIN

EDINBURGH
Royal Scottish Academy, tel: (131) 558-8921, open daily. To Oct. 11: "William Gillies Centenary Exhibition." 200 paintings by the Scottish artist (1860-1973). Includes Scottish landscapes, portraits painted in the 1920s and '30s and still lifes of his later years.

LONDON
British Museum, tel: (171) 323-8525, open daily. Continuing/To Sept. 20: "The Print in Stuart Britain, 1603-1689." A survey of British printmaking under the four Stuart kings in the 17th century. www.britishmuseum.ac.uk

DENMARK

HUMLEBAEK
Louisiana Museum of Modern Art, tel: 49-19-07-19, open daily. Continuing/To Aug. 30: "Louisiana at 40: The Collection Today." Works from the collection that started with Danish Modernism and has expanded to include post-World War II art. www.louisiana.dk

FRANCE

PARIS
Jardins du Palais-Royal. Open 7 A.M. to 11 P.M. Continuing/To Aug. 31: "Jacques Lipchitz." Sculptures by the Lithuanian-born artist (1891-1973) are exhibited in the 18th-century gardens.

SAINT-PAUL-DE-VERNE
Fondation Maeght, tel: 04-83-32-81-63, open daily. To Oct. 18: "Otto Dix." A selection of paintings, drawings, sketches and engravings by the German artist (1899-1970). The realistic World War I sketches and engravings precede the disillusioned depictions of life in the Weimar Republic that led to his being branded a "degenerate" artist by the Nazis. After World War II, Dix painted mainly religious subjects.

GERMANY

COLOGNE
Museum Ludwig, tel: (221) 221-2382, closed Mondays. Continuing/To Oct. 11: "Robert Rauschenberg Retrospective." A chronological exhibition of paintings, collages and installations by the American artist (born 1925).

WEST-AM-RHEIN

Vitra Design Museum, tel: (7821) 702-3200, closed Mondays. Continuing/To Oct. 11: "Frank Lloyd Wright: Die Lebendige Stadt." Drawings, photographs, architectural models and furniture document the work of the American architect and designer (1867-1959). www.vitra.com

GREECE

ATHENS
Museum of Cycladic Art, tel: (1) 722-8231, closed Sundays and Tuesdays. Continuing/To Aug. 31: "Edward Lear: The Painter of Greece." Watercolors created by the British artist (1812-1888) during his travels.

HUNGARY

BUDAPEST
Hungarian National Gallery, tel: (1) 175-7533, closed Mondays. To Sept. 6: "Jozsef Rippl-Ronai." A retrospective of more than 200 works by the Hungarian painter (1861-1927). Rippl-Ronai lived in Paris from 1887 to 1900 and became a member of the Nabu, before returning to Hungary.

ISRAEL

JERUSALEM
Israel Museum, tel: (2) 6470-8811, open daily. Continuing/To Sept. 1: "In the Light of the Menorah." Looks at how the seven-branched candelabra was transformed from a sacred object to a symbol of destruction and redemption. www.imj.org.il

ITALY

FERRARA
Palazzo dei Diamanti, tel: (532) 20-99-88, To Aug. 30: "Thomas Gainsborough." Paintings and drawings by the British artist (1727-1788). Gainsborough's portraits of fashionable personalities brought him fame in London where he lived after 1774.

SIENA
Palazzo Pubblico, tel: (577) 292-209, To Sept. 13: "Tony Cragg." The medieval city hall is the backdrop to the works of the British sculptor (born 1949).

JAPAN

TOKYO
Iwano Museum, tel: (3) 33-52-11-11, closed Wednesdays. To Aug. 31: "Bojmans van Beuningen Museum: Art of the 20th Century." On loan from the Rotterdam museum, works by Munch, Klee, Chagall and Man Ray.

SINGAPORE

Singapore History Museum, tel: 332-8259, closed Mondays. To December: "House of Jade: The Av

A 1926 Futurist landscape by Ivo Pannaggi, on view in Lausanne at the Fondation de l'Hermitage.

Boon Haw Collection. Features a selection of jade carvings from the Qing Dynasty (1644-1911), as well as Jasper, quartz and agate ornaments. www.museum.org.sg/ahw/

SOUTH KOREA

SEOUL
Binn Museum of Art, tel: (2) 721-7772, To Aug. 10: "Notalgia in 400 Years: The Shim Su-won Family's Ceramic Art." Four centuries ago, Korean craftsmen were sent to Japan to develop and teach their art. The exhibition features 140 ceramic works created by 14 generations of potters in the Shim family.

SPAIN

BILBAO
Guggenheim Museum Bilbao, tel: (4) 435-9000, closed Mondays. To Oct. 22: "China: 5,000 Anos."

machines and new technologies. The exhibition brings together 130 paintings, sculptures and works on paper.

UNITED STATES

LOS ANGELES
J. Paul Getty Museum, tel: (310) 440-7300, closed Mondays and Tuesdays. To Oct. 11: "Walker Evans: New York." New York—its people, its streets, its signs, its architecture—was a persistent theme in the work of Walker Evans, better known for his Depression-era images of the rural American South. The exhibition of more than 100 photographs spans the period from 1927 to 1963. www.getty.edu

NEW YORK
Metropolitan Museum, tel: (212) 570-7201, closed Mondays. Continuing/To Aug. 29: "Prayerbook for a Queen: The Hours of Jeanne d'Evreux." Pages from the Hours, illuminated by the French artist Jean Pucelle in the early 14th century. www.metmuseum.org

WASHINGTON
Arthur M. Sackler Gallery, tel: (202) 357-2700, open daily. To Jan. 3: "The Buddha's Art of Healing." Paintings from a medical treatise document the corpus of Tibetan medical knowledge and its concept of treatment, which interweaves spiritual, magical and rational healing practices. This 1920s copy of a 17th-century document was used to train doctors in a remote province of the former Soviet Union and was confiscated during Stalinist purges. <http://180.111.7.240/organizations/museum/freer/start.htm>

CLOSING SOON

AMERICA
Aug. 9: "A Collector's Cabinet." National Gallery of Art, Washington. www.nga.gov
Aug. 9: "Posters American Style." National Museum of American Art, Washington. www.nmaas.si.edu
Aug. 11: "Treasures of African Art from the Tervuren Museum." Museum for African Art, New York.

ASIA
Aug. 9: "Raku: A Dynasty of Japanese Ceramists." Suntory Museum, Tokyo.
Aug. 9: "Cheng Chong Swee" and "Lim Tze Peng." Singapore Art Museum, Singapore. www.museum.sg

EUROPE
Aug. 9: "Henry Moore." Palais Harcourt, Vienna.
Aug. 10: "Arnold Böcklin, Giorgio de Chirico, Max Ernst: Eine Reise ins Ungeheuer." Nationalgalerie, Berlin.

SPANISH LANGUAGE GUIDE

with AT&T Direct™ Service. Get fast, clear, reliable connections home from foreign lands. Just dial the access number of the country you're calling from and charge it to your AT&T Calling Card or credit card. Translation! Easy worldwide calling. For a list of access numbers, see our ad on the back page.

AT&T Access Numbers

Country	Access Number	International	1-800-555-0000
Spain	0034-91-411-1111	0034-91-411-1111	1-800-555-0000
Spain	0034-91-411-1111	0034-91-411-1111	1-800-555-0000
Spain	0034-91-411-1111	0034-91-411-1111	1-800-555-0000
Spain	0034-91-411-1111	0034-91-411-1111	1-800-555-0000
Spain	0034-91-411-1111	0034-91-411-1111	1-800-555-0000
Spain	0034-91-411-1111	0034-91-411-1111	1-800-555-0000
Spain	0034-91-411-1111	0034-91-411-1111	1-800-555-0000
Spain	0034-91-411-1111	0034-91-411-1111	1-800-555-0000
Spain	0034-91-411-1111	0034-91-411-1111	1-800-555-0000
Spain	0034-91-411-1111	0034-91-411-1111	1-800-555-0000

(now you're talking)

It's all within your reach.

Y n is ic
O je ir te re
re
a-

INTERNATIONAL

'So Many Sick People' in Zimbabwe, Now the Deadly Center of AIDS

By Michael Specter
New York Times Service

TSHOLOTSHO, Zimbabwe — They loaded McDonald's into the donkey cart about 10 minutes after the doctor signed his papers. He had been dead for two days — one less than he lived — but it took his mother a while to make it to the district hospital so far from her home.

The whole transaction lasted about two minutes. Dr. Bart Vander Plaetse took a piece of paper with the words "Notice of the Death of a Person" printed on top. He wrote down the dead boy's name and for his age he scribbled in a fraction: 1/52. Since he had no idea of the cause of death, the doctor listed ARI — acute respiratory infection.

"That's what we say when we can't say something else," Dr. Vander Plaetse explained with a sad shrug. "It'll let his mother bury him."

The next sounds floating through the doctor's window were the thud of a cow bell and the whack of a whip as two donkeys hauled the body to the burial ground across the road. McDonald's mother and grandmother sat in the cart with the cardboard box that held their boy. Several women walked behind softly singing funeral songs.

There were no men at the service: McDonald's father died a few months ago. His grandfather died last year. A brother died the year before. And three uncles are also gone.

"You almost can't keep track of it all," said Dr. Vander Plaetse, a gentle, 32-year-old internist from Belgium who is one of two doctors serving this rural area of 140,000 people not far from the border of Botswana.

"There are just so many sick people," he said. "We want to control it all and we try. But it's getting harder. There are times when it seems like it's getting out from under us."

Zimbabwe has suddenly turned into the deadly center of the AIDS epidemic. Recent studies suggest that it may have the highest infection rate on earth.

The optimism of the West is a cruel fantasy in Zimbabwe. There are no treatments, no cure, little hope and — in almost every country in Africa — far more pressing problems to face each day.

The savage virus has left few people untouched: It has devastated families, communities and cities. But seen through the weary and often bloodshot eyes of the beleaguered doctors and nurses who must attend to the sick people around them, AIDS is just another word for dying — and it's just another disease.

People here call it iyoyo — "that thing." In the spare but spotless clinics of Zimbabwe — where aspirin is available only a third of the time — "that thing" may not even be the one that matters most. With an average of less than $10 to spend on each person's health every year, most African countries have no money for tests, for fancy drugs or for complicated support networks.

Despite the magnitude of the epidemic, the great majority of people in Africa have no idea if they are infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, and most do not want to know.

Zimbabwe once had a health system that was the envy of southern Africa. Yet, fueled by AIDS and by increasing poverty and instability, illness has begun to overcome the country. Tuberculosis, hepatitis, malaria, measles and cholera — all wholly preventable — have surged mercilessly. So have infant mortality, stillbirths and sexually transmitted diseases.

In 1996, during the last heavy rains, this region in the center of Zimbabwe reported 82,000 cases of malaria — which means that more than half of the local population got sick.

In 1989, 100 people died of malaria in Zimbabwe. Last year the figure was 2,800. Reported cases of tuberculosis — the sentinel illness of poverty and social decline — have risen to 35,000 last year from 5,000 in 1986. This year it is worse.

If the effects of it all are sometimes impossible to believe, they are also impossible to ignore. Average life expectancy in Zimbabwe — often considered the most reliable barometer of a nation's health — was 61 in 1993. By the end of the century, it will fall to 49.

"AIDS is the basic fact of all our lives," said Dr. Vander Plaetse, whose workday runs from dawn to dusk and includes dealing with everything from setting bones to major surgery. "But it is not the only fact. And to be honest, it is not a fact we can do that much about."

"It may sound callous," he added, "but there may be better ways to spend our time and money than treating a complicated disease we will never have the money or the drugs or the ability to cure." It is an understandable comment from a man who could not send his nurses out in the community in July to distribute vaccines because the Health Ministry had no money left to buy gas for the car.

The epidemic has already killed 10 million people in sub-Saharan Africa — 90 percent of the world's AIDS deaths. Because there is so little hope of access to the best drugs, at least 20 million more will almost certainly die.

Tsholotsho is a two-hour drive from Bulawayo, the nearest big city. Most patients walk — sometimes for days across dried river beds and dusty roads — to get here.

On this day, Dr. Vander Plaetse will sweep from one room to the next, setting bones, operating on an elderly woman with internal bleeding, checking the health of pregnant women, seeing dozens of patients with skin rashes, eye diseases, malaria and tuberculosis.

A woman in a bright red dress, wrapped in a yellow polyester blanket, appears. She is wearing tennis shoes and says she is losing weight, bleeding and having dizzy spells.

He examines her but it is hard to guess her problem.

"Does your neck hurt you?" he asked, after examining her swollen glands. She shrugs. "Tell her we will give her tablets," Dr. Vander Plaetse says to a nurse who helps him negotiate the roughest spots of the Shona language. "We will give her pills to help her retain water. And we will give her some vitamins."

It's not much, but there is not much else he has to offer. The woman might have malaria or pneumonia or diarrhea or TB or dysentery. Or all of them, or AIDS.

She looks at the pills she is handed as if they were pythons. Then she walks out. The next patient is coughing too hard to talk. Dr. Vander Plaetse decides to let him sit in the hall for a few moments, until he feels better. He never comes back.

Georgian Capital Seeks A Rescue From Ruin

Historians Struggle to Save Tbilisi's Old Town

By Stephen Kinzer
New York Times Service

TBILISI, Georgia — No one here seems to know how Tbilisi's old town avoided the devastation wreaked across the Soviet Union by short-sighted planners who razed countless old neighborhoods to make way for ugly concrete apartment complexes. But survive it did, and today it is a delightful maze of cobble streets, twisting lanes, colorful wooden facades and marvelous architectural detail.

Much of the old town was declared a historic district in 1975, but although that decree has preserved much of its character, little has been done to restore crumbling facades and interiors. Now architectural historians are mapping the area house by house, and hope to attract international help for a large-scale preservation program.

Buildings in the old town are in styles ranging from Russian and French classical to Art Nouveau. Many could be classified only as highly eclectic. Spiral staircases wind up along ivy-covered facades to deep wooden balconies. Leafy parks, Persian archways, delicate masonry patterns and courtyards shaded by spreading mulberry trees contribute to the visitor's sense of having escaped the modern world.

The old town, which is spread over several hundred acres, is home to thousands of families. Many are poor, but some are young professionals who have begun fixing up old buildings and opening restaurants, cafés, boutiques and art galleries. Reflecting Georgia's history of religious tolerance, there is not only a Georgian Orthodox cathedral but also a mosque, a synagogue, a Russian Orthodox bell tower and an Armenian Gregorian church.

"There's so much history in this area, we can't let it fall apart," a gallery owner said. "Unfortunately, some of the people who have their eyes on this neighborhood just want to wreck what makes it so interesting. We need to find a way to fix it up without ruining it."

Tbilisi has been the capital of Georgia since 458, and what is now the old town is its traditional center. It has been destroyed several times, most recently by Persian invaders in 1795. Among the district's historical monuments is one commemorating the sacrifice of the "300 men of Aragvi," warriors who died while rescuing Georgia's king during the 1795 battle.

Georgia's location astride ancient trade routes has made it a melting pot for Asian and European influences, and both are visible in Tbilisi's old town.

Many homes seem to have been built with an eye toward providing open space on terraces or in gardens, a testament to the communal nature of Georgian society. Georgians like to say that friends and good company are among life's greatest pleasures and that living within one's own four walls is little more than a form of imprisonment.

Although street patterns in the old town are ancient, most of its buildings date from the 19th and early 20th centuries. Some are being defaced by tasteless renovation and poor materials, but the greatest threat to the neighborhood is decay and neglect.

In a 150-year-old caravanserai, where Silk Road traders once gathered, 22 families live in tiny rooms and share a single toilet.

City officials want to restore the building, perhaps turning it into an elegant guest house. Residents say they will move only if suitable housing can be found for them nearby. They have turned down an offer of quarters in a Soviet-style apartment complex on the edge of Tbilisi.

Another caravanserai nearby is so decayed that little more than a brick shell remains. Garbage is piled in what was once the basement.

"Too much shame, too much," lamented Maia Mania, one of the architectural historians plotting a strategy to rescue the old town, as she passed by one morning. Working with a grant from the World Bank, Ms. Mania and three colleagues are trying to decide which buildings are best candidates for careful restoration. Lack of money is her biggest challenge, but hardly the only one. The old town is full of cracked facades, flaking plaster, decomposing bricks and rotting beams.

"Tbilisi lacks a good system for controlling groundwater," Ms. Mania said. "Dampness seeps up and destroys more than the Soviets did."

While hoping for outside help, Ms. Mania and her colleagues are drafting a plan to create "urban islands" of individual blocks or buildings. "This way we could concentrate our resources on places that are especially beautiful or especially endangered or have especially great potential," she said. "Most people here understand that the old town is something very precious. We have to go further, to show them that it is a monument of worldwide importance and that with the right care it could again be something truly glorious."

IRAQ: Firm Response From UN

Continued from Page 1

company a team of UN weapons experts, forcing them to abandon their planned searches, an Iraqi government official said. The weapons teams cannot work without escorts under the agreement between the United Nations and Iraq.

Team members were not allowed to conduct "discussions with Iraqi authorities on arms or visits to sites or searches for past weapons," the official said.

A White House spokesman, P.J. Crowley, said Iraqi "noncompliance" is completely unacceptable.

"We will not allow Iraq access to resources necessary to restart their weapons of mass destruction program," he said. "We will continue to keep the pressure on until Iraq complies fully with their obligations." Mr. Crowley called Iraq's decision "counterproductive," warning, "There is no prospect that Iraq will obtain a lifting of sanctions until it fully cooperates."

He confirmed that Iraq did not provide its normal escorts for an inspection team carrying out an unscheduled check, but said routine monitoring otherwise continued.

On Thursday, convoys of UN vehicles carrying some monitoring officials left the UN headquarters near Baghdad, followed by cars with Iraqi officials. No one interfered with their work.

"Ongoing monitoring continues," a UN spokesman, Janet Sullivan, said.

Some 460 sites in Iraq have been inspected and are being monitored. About 100 UN experts visit the sites or use remote-controlled cameras and sensors.

An Iraqi soldier watching a UN team head out from Baghdad on Thursday as some monitoring continued.

latest move will only delay the moment when the Security Council can consider the removal of sanctions," he said. Britain has been a staunch opponent of relaxing sanctions on Iraq.

France — another permanent Security Council mem-

Hanan Ashrawi telling of her resignation Thursday.

Abdul Jawad Saleh, discussing his decision to quit.

PALESTINE: In Rebuke to Arafat, 2 Resign From His Cabinet

Continued from Page 1

estinian Authority, which rules Gaza and parts of the West Bank.

Along with the stalled pace of progress toward a broader peace with Israel, the chief causes have been worsening economic problems in Palestinian-ruled areas and the nearly universal perception that his Palestinian Authority is corrupt and inefficient.

But the departures seemed unlikely to evolve into any real threat to his leadership, Palestinian analysts said.

In the shuffle that he announced on Wednesday, Mr. Arafat added 10 new members to the 18-member cabinet, but he did not dismiss any of those most widely seen as corrupt.

Mrs. Ashrawi, who was one of two female members of the cabinet, gained international visibility as the spokeswoman for the Palestinian delegation to the Middle East peace conference in Madrid in 1991. She has appeared frequently on American television, and she had served since 1994 as minister of higher education.

As part of the shuffle, Mr. Arafat had asked Mrs. Ashrawi to move to the Tourism Ministry. Mrs. Ashrawi announced that she had decided not to accept that appointment, and she made clear that the reason for her refusal to join the new team was based on more than a job preference.

"Being part of this new formation in my opinion will not achieve anything," she told reporters in the West Bank town of Ramallah. She described herself as part of a "genuine change and reform campaign."

CLINTON: Starr Inquiry Enters Endgame as Lewinsky Testifies Before the Grand Jury

Continued from Page 1

and the congressmen seated on the lawn before him, gave no sign of hearing questions shouted loudly and insistently by a reporter: "Are you concerned about Lewinsky testifying today? ... Are you sticking with your story, your denial?"

Later, a White House spokesman, Barry Toiv, said that the president "has not expressed any view to us" on Ms. Lewinsky's testimony. Mr. Toiv quoted Mr. Clinton as saying only that if the testimony meant "we're nearing the end of this four-year, over $40 million investigation, then that would be a good thing."

Ms. Lewinsky's testimony has been keenly awaited since Mr. Starr began investigating her relationship with Mr. Clinton on Jan. 26. He was authorized days earlier to include it in an investigation that began as an inquiry into land dealings by the president and his wife.

The president has no plans to comment publicly on the matter, aides say, before his scheduled testimony Aug. 17 from the White House. That extraordinary appearance will be broadcast by closed-circuit television — the signal will be scrambled for security — to the jurors in the courthouse, several blocks away.

While it was unclear how Ms. Lewinsky's testimony would play out, her credibility was automatically a question: If she in fact tells the jury that she and Mr. Clinton had a sexual relationship, then she will be conceding that she lied Jan. 7 when she signed an affidavit in the Paula Jones sexual harassment case denying such a relationship.

Nonetheless, opinion polls show that by a very slender margin, Americans would be more likely to believe her than him about such a sexual affair.

Because Ms. Lewinsky is testifying under a sweeping grant of immunity — extended as well to her mother, Marcia Lewis, and to her father, Bernard Lewinsky — the grand jury might be expected to believe that she has no reason now to lie.

In the end, legal analysts say, the grand jury's assessment of Ms. Lewinsky's credibility might not matter. Mr. Starr may elect not to use the jury to seek an indictment of a sitting president, which might be barred by the constitution.

Instead, legal analysts say, Mr. Starr may use the grand jury proceedings to complete his investigation in order to provide a fuller report, expected by late next month, to Congress in view of potential impeachment proceedings.

Democrats have tried to play down that threat. On Capitol Hill, the House minority leader, Richard Gephardt of Illinois, said it would be a "grave mistake" for Mr. Starr to send a report to Congress in the weeks leading up to the November midterm elections.

Anticipation of Ms. Lewinsky's appearance was so intense that courthouse security officials had met with news media executives about ways to maintain decorum.

On Thursday, tourists and passers-by were outnumbered by the more than 100 reporters and cameramen.

One tourist, George Hancock of Bowling Green, Kentucky, carried a bright yellow sign bearing the words "Good Luck, Monica." "I just want her to know that we wish her well," he told a gaggle of reporters who surrounded him.

Reviving Executive Privilege

Susan Schmidt and Ruth Marcus of The Washington Post reported earlier:

Mr. Clinton has moved to block White

CONGO: Rebels Widen War

Continued from Page 1

shasa from the country's sole seaport. Despite these troubles, Mr. Kabila promised a long war, saying that "ordinary Congolese" may be called upon to take up arms to defend the country.

Mr. Kabila has been anything but a broadly popular leader since overthrowing Mr. Mobutu, but the government's sharply nationalist rhetoric has apparently struck a powerful chord, at least in Kinshasa and other areas of the west, where interference in the country's affairs by Rwanda is deeply resented.

The depth of anti-Rwandan and anti-Tutsi feeling in much of western Congo raises questions about whether a rebel movement like the current one can credibly seize power even if it manages to defeat Mr. Kabila.

"They have been trying hard to broaden their base in the last couple of days and find some non-Tutsi names to identify the rebellion with, but this is going to be a real problem later," said a European diplomat. "The people of Congo are not likely to accept any kind of movement that springs from Rwanda."

At a demonstration attended by thousands Thursday in the capital, Congolese youth carried banners denouncing the Rwandans and the Tutsi in particular, chanting slogans never to surrender to their country's smaller neighbor.

There have also been persistent reports since the start of the uprising of a campaign of house-to-house arrests of Congolese Tutsi in the capital, in which hundreds of people have been led away to detention.

A Western diplomat who spoke on the condition of anonymity said Thursday that he found credible reports that as many as 800 Tutsi had been interned at Camp Tshatshi, a military base on the outskirts of Kinshasa.

MOTHER: For Years, Her Babies Died — Now, Murder Charges

Continued from Page 1

Authorities, who declined to speculate on a motive, said insurance policies were taken out on six of the children.

According to court papers, all the children allegedly were murdered between April 1949 and January 1968 in the modest home the Noes occupied in a rundown blue-collar neighborhood.

The investigation "indicates that all of the babies were normal at birth and all of them were healthy and developing normally," an affidavit for probable cause for an arrest warrant stated.

"All of the eight infants were in the exclusive custody of the mother, Marie Noe, at the time of their deaths. All eight infants were described by the mother, Marie Noe, as gasping for breath and turning blue in her reports to either neighbors or rescue personnel who were called by her and who discovered her to be alone with the babies," the affidavit continued.

All eight infants were pronounced dead on arrival at the various hospitals where they were taken. Upon pronouncement of death, there was no physical evidence of trauma and no reasonable medical explanation nor any finding of natural disease as to the cause of the deaths," the affidavit added.

After an article in the magazine Philadelphia and in a book, "The Death of Innocents," which contended that most multiple crib deaths in the same family should be considered as possible homicides, police reopened the investigation.

According to court papers, death certificates and autopsy reports were reviewed by Dr. Hareesh Mirchandani, Philadelphia's medical examiner, and his deputy, Dr. Ian Hood. Both concluded all eight infants were suffocated.

The affidavit supporting the arrest warrant said Mrs. Noe admitted suffocating her first child, Richard Alan, who was born March 7, 1949, and taken home in good health from Temple University Hospital. After 31 days, he was dead. She also admitted, the court papers said, killing her daughter Elizabeth Mary, who after five months and nine days was pronounced dead-on-arrival in Temple's emergency room.

She said she may have suffocated her third child, Jacqueline, who was pronounced dead at another hospital after 21 days of life, and her fifth, Constance, who was born Feb. 24, 1958, and died after 28 days.

At one point during an earlier investigation, detectives interviewed Dr. Abraham Perlman, who was working in the pediatrics department of St. Luke's Hospital and remembered taking a newborn named Constance.

Because of the previous deaths, the physician ordered extensive tests for the infant. All the tests were normal.

"Upon discharge from the hospital, Dr. Perlman told Mrs. Noe that Constance Noe was a beautiful baby," the court papers said. "She's not going to live — make it," Mrs. Noe responded, according to the court papers. "Just like the others."

EUROPE

Russia Oil Companies
Warned to Pay Taxes

In Fiscal Pinch, Moscow Tries to Get Tough

By Michael Wines
New York Times Service

MOSCOW — The government's tax collectors swooped down on three of Russia's biggest oil companies Thursday, seizing executives' cars, apartments and other assets to hammer home a demand for more than $150 million in back taxes.

The seizures came atop new indications that President Boris Yeltsin's economic advisers, unlike his previous ones, are serious about carrying out Moscow's latest last-ditch program to stave off fiscal collapse.

Shell's Earnings
Slump by 17%

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

AMSTERDAM — Royal Dutch/Shell Group on Thursday reported earnings of $1.54 billion for the second quarter, a fall of 17 percent from a year earlier.

The company blamed low oil prices and the Asian crisis. The earnings for the quarter, which ended June 30, were at the low end of analysts' expectations.

Sales fell by 17 percent, to $34.7 billion. "Globally, the outlook for the second half of the year is for further deterioration," the company warned.

Royal Dutch shares closed down 7.80 guilders, at 92.10 guilders. In London, Shell closed off 26.5 pence, at 356 pence.

"The quality of these figures is poor, and the company has a great deal of work to do to get these numbers up," said Jürgen Lunshof, an analyst with Credit Lyonnais Securities.

Investigators from the Russian State Tax Service moved on the offices of Eastern Oil. Onako and Sidanko, the three petroleum companies, less than a day after Prime Minister Sergei Kiriyenko met oil executives privately to demand back payments and discuss changes in tax policies.

The Tax Service's chief of corporate collections, Vladimir Popov, said that the raids ought not to be regarded as evidence of a war against businesses, but as "the beginning of a well-thought-out program of working with major taxpayers like oil companies."

Investment analysts agreed that the actions were well thought out. "It's an inexorable process," said Tom Adshad, the co-director of research at United Financial Group in Moscow. "They're going down the list of big tax debtors, one by one. There are a lot of people out there who owe them money."

Mr. Yeltsin said only last week that he expected this autumn to be politically difficult, and the government's newfound toughness reflects preparations for that.

The government is in a political and fiscal bind. International lenders have made it clear that they will pull their money out and refuse to make new loans — bankrupting the government — unless Russia reforms its tax system and improves collections.

But those very changes seem destined to enrage citizens who have already lost wages or pensions to corruption, inflation or economic collapse and who find new taxes repugnant. Russia has increased tax collections for three straight months, to about $1.9 billion in July, and it plans to pass the $2 billion mark in August. But those amounts are still only about 80 percent of the goal set by the International Monetary Fund, which controls a $22.5 billion loan package designed to keep the government solvent while it works on the economy and on its fiscal structure.

Like many outside experts, Mr. Adshad of United Financial Group says Moscow has only until autumn to demonstrate that it is on the road to recovery. "If the October numbers where people are really expecting the government to deliver," he said.

Boris Fyodorov, right, the head of Russia's Federal Tax Service.

Zeneca Reassures Investors
After Pound Erodes Profit

Reassures

LONDON — Zeneca Group PLC reassured investors it was on course to meet earnings growth targets on Thursday, despite an $81 million ($132.6 million) profit hit from the effect of the strong pound in the first half of the year.

The currency impact was the major factor behind a 2 percent fall in pretax profit to £654 million at the pharmaceuticals and chemicals group, just below consensus forecasts of £660 million.

Group sales rose 5 percent to £2.89 billion. Zeneca's shares touched a low of £21.84 in early trading as the market struggled to digest the results, which were also skewed by £65 million of charges for integration costs, plant closures and the millennium bug.

But a confident performance by management at an analysts' meeting soothed nerves about the group's agrochemicals business and the slower-than-expected acceptance of newer drugs, including the migraine tablet Zomig and the schizophrenia treatment Seroquel.

The stock ended the session up 15 pence at £22.80. "This was a sound set of figures," said the Salomon Smith Barney analyst Kevin Wilson, who added that the group had given positive indications on its long-term potential.

Zeneca's chief executive, Sir David Barnes, who steps up to become chairman of the group in May next year, stressed the underlying performance.

"Across the board there has been strong underlying volume growth in constant exchange-rate terms, with sales up 11 percent, profit before tax up 10 percent and pharmaceutical sales up 15 percent, with the all-important U.S. market growing by 24 percent," he said.

The publisher said profit was dented by the strong pound and investments in new product development. Reed Elsevier is the operating company of Britain's Reed International and the Netherlands' Elsevier NV, which each own 50 percent of the company. Elsevier's Herman Bruggink and Reed's Nigel Stapleton currently serve as co-chairmen.

Under the new structure, the publisher would merge its two management boards and hire a new chief operating executive from outside the company.

Central Bank
In Britain
Leaves Rate
Unchanged

Agence France-Press

LONDON — The Bank of England said Thursday it was leaving its benchmark interest rate unchanged at 7.5 percent in August, a decision met with relief by hard-pressed manufacturers.

With evidence piling up that the British economy is cooling, economists have argued recently that rates should no longer rise, or should even come back down.

The deputy director-general of the British Chambers of Commerce, Ian Peters, said the decision to hold rates steady "reflects the now abundant real world evidence that the economy is slowing sufficiently."

The central bank was made independent by the government in May 1997 and given the target of holding inflation at 2.5 percent a year.

Since then, the bank has increased the base rate six times, angering business and pushing the value of the pound higher, hurting the profits of exporters.

The Bank of England has had to weigh conflicting evidence in its fight against inflation. Although manufacturing has slumped, the service sector has remained relatively strong and wages have continued to rise.

The government argues that low productivity is the chief problem.

Reed Elsevier Recasts Management

Reed Elsevier

LONDON — The Anglo-Dutch publisher Reed Elsevier PLC reported stronger profit than analysts expected on Thursday and said it was streamlining management to oversee its transition to a mixed print and electronic publishing business.

The company posted an adjusted pretax profit of £413 million ($660.8 million) for the first six months of the year, down from £419 million a year ago, but that still topped market expectations. Sales slipped to £1.59 billion from £1.68 billion a year ago.

Source: Teletels

Very briefly:

• Barclays PLC's first-half pretax profit rose to £1.29 billion ($2.11 billion) from £1.27 billion. The British bank said provisions for bad loans rose to £129 million from £90 million and that underlying costs rose 4 percent while income rose 7 percent.

• LVMH Moët Hennessy Louis Vuitton SA has sold the Pere Magloire brand of Calvados to private investors to allow its Veuve Clicquot unit, which controlled the brand, to expand in champagne. LVMH did not disclose the price. Finance du Pays d'Ange, which bought the brand, now controls 30 percent of the production of Calvados, a strong liqueur made from apples, according to the French newspaper Le Figaro.

• VIAG Air's first-half pretax profit rose 28 percent, to 1.92 billion Deutsche marks ($1.08 billion), as the conglomerate improved performance at its Bayerwerk, SKW and VAW units. Sales rose 13 percent, to 26.77 billion DM.

• Aeroflot-Russian International Airlines will receive a $350 million syndicated loan from a group of foreign banks to lease 10 new Boeing 737-400 airplanes. The 12-year loan is guaranteed by the U.S. Export-Import Bank and was arranged by Chase Manhattan Bank.

• The Bank of Israel cut its benchmark lending rate to 9.5 percent from 11 percent, the eighth rate cut this year.

• Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd., Israel's largest drugmaker, said second-quarter profit fell 50 percent, to $17.1 million as the company failed to get new drugs approved for U.S. use and sales in Israel fell.

• Renault SA's first-half revenue rose 22 percent, to 121.69 billion francs ($20.51 billion), driven by the success of its Megane models, the Clio II and the Kangoo series.

• Bayerische Motoren Werke AG said Asian sales fell 31 percent in the first half, to 33.70 billion. Bloomberg, Reuters, AP

WORLD STOCK MARKETS

Thursday, Aug. 6

Daily prices in local currencies.

Teletels

High Low Close Prev.

Amsterdam

AEX index: 1182.92

Previous: 1186.77

ASML 99.30 49.30 49.30 49.30

ASML 100.00 50.00 50.00 50.00

ASML 101.00 51.00 51.00 51.00

ASML 102.00 52.00 52.00 52.00

ASML 103.00 53.00 53.00 53.00

ASML 104.00 54.00 54.00 54.00

ASML 105.00 55.00 55.00 55.00

ASML 106.00 56.00 56.00 56.00

ASML 107.00 57.00 57.00 57.00

ASML 108.00 58.00 58.00 58.00

ASML 109.00 59.00 59.00 59.00

ASML 110.00 60.00 60.00 60.00

ASML 111.00 61.00 61.00 61.00

ASML 112.00 62.00 62.00 62.00

ASML 113.00 63.00 63.00 63.00

ASML 114.00 64.00 64.00 64.00

ASML 115.00 65.00 65.00 65.00

ASML 116.00 66.00 66.00 66.00

ASML 117.00 67.00 67.00 67.00

ASML 118.00 68.00 68.00 68.00

ASML 119.00 69.00 69.00 69.00

ASML 120.00 70.00 70.00 70.00

ASML 121.00 71.00 71.00 71.00

ASML 122.00 72.00 72.00 72.00

ASML 123.00 73.00 73.00 73.00

ASML 124.00 74.00 74.00 74.00

ASML 125.00 75.00 75.00 75.00

ASML 126.00 76.00 76.00 76.00

ASML 127.00 77.00 77.00 77.00

ASML 128.00 78.00 78.00 78.00

ASML 129.00 79.00 79.00 79.00

ASML 130.00 80.00 80.00 80.00

ASML 131.00 81.00 81.00 81.00

ASML 132.00 82.00 82.00 82.00

ASML 133.00 83.00 83.00 83.00

ASML 134.00 84.00 84.00 84.00

ASML 135.00 85.00 85.00 85.00

ASML 136.00 86.00 86.00 86.00

ASML 137.00 87.00 87.00 87.00

ASML 138.00 88.00 88.00 88.00

ASML 139.00 89.00 89.00 89.00

ASML 140.00 90.00 90.00 90.00

ASML 141.00 91.00 91.00 91.00

ASML 142.00 92.00 92.00 92.00

ASML 143.00 93.00 93.00 93.00

ASML 144.00 94.00 94.00 94.00

Frankfurt

DAX index: 5517.64

Previous: 5522.51

ASML 99.30 49.30 49.30 49.30

ASML 100.00 50.00 50.00 50.00

ASML 101.00 51.00 51.00 51.00

ASML 102.00 52.00 52.00 52.00

ASML 103.00 53.00 53.00 53.00

ASML 104.00 54.00 54.00 54.00

ASML 105.00 55.00 55.00 55.00

ASML 106.00 56.00 56.00 56.00

ASML 107.00 57.00 57.00 57.00

ASML 108.00 58.00 58.00 58.00

ASML 109.00 59.00 59.00 59.00

ASML 110.00 60.00 60.00 60.00

ASML 111.00 61.00 61.00 61.00

ASML 112.00 62.00 62.00 62.00

ASML 113.00 63.00 63.00 63.00

ASML 114.00 64.00 64.00 64.00

ASML 115.00 65.00 65.00 65.00

ASML 116.00 66.00 66.00 66.00

ASML 117.00 67.00 67.00 67.00

ASML 118.00 68.00 68.00 68.00

ASML 119.00 69.00 69.00 69.00

ASML 120.00 70.00 70.00 70.00

ASML 121.00 71.00 71.00 71.00

ASML 122.00 72.00 72.00 72.00

ASML 123.00 73.00 73.00 73.00

ASML 124.00 74.00 74.00 74.00

ASML 125.00 75.00 75.00 75.00

ASML 126.00 76.00 76.00 76.00

ASML 127.00 77.00 77.00 77.00

ASML 128.00 78.00 78.00 78.00

ASML 129.00 79.00 79.00 79.00

ASML 130.00 80.00 80.00 80.00

ASML 131.00 81.00 81.00 81.00

ASML 132.00 82.00 82.00 82.00

ASML 133.00 83.00 83.00 83.00

ASML 134.00 84.00 84.00 84.00

ASML 135.00 85.00 85.00 85.00

ASML 136.00 86.00 86.00 86.00

ASML 137.00 87.00 87.00 87.00

ASML 138.00 88.00 88.00 88.00

ASML 139.00 89.00 89.00 89.00

ASML 140.00 90.00 90.00 90.00

ASML 141.00 91.00 91.00 91.00

ASML 142.00 92.00 92.00 92.00

ASML 143.00 93.00 93.00 93.00

ASML 144.00 94.00 94.00 94.00

ASML 145.00 95.00 95.00 95.00

ASML 146.00 96.00 96.00 96.00

ASML 147.00 97.00 97.00 97.00

ASML 148.00 98.00 98.00 98.00

ASML 149.00 99.00 99.00 99.00

Johannesburg

All Share index: 6721.74

Previous: 6728.39

ASML 99.30 49.30 49.30 49.30

ASML 100.00 50.00 50.00 50.00

ASML 101.00 51.00 51.00 51.00

ASML 102.00 52.00 52.00 52.00

ASML 103.00 53.00 53.00 53.00

ASML 104.00 54.00 54.00 54.00

ASML 105.00 55.00 55.00 55.00

ASML 106.00 56.00 56.00 56.00

ASML 107.00 57.00 57.00 57.00

ASML 108.00 58.00 58.00 58.00

ASML 109.00 59.00 59.00 59.00

ASML 110.00 60.00 60.00 60.00

ASML 111.00 61.00 61.00 61.00

ASML 112.00 62.00 62.00 62.00

ASML 113.00 63.00 63.00 63.00

ASML 114.00 64.00 64.00 64.00

ASML 115.00 65.00 65.00 65.00

ASML 116.00 66.00 66.00 66.00

ASML 117.00 67.00 67.00 67.00

ASML 118.00 68.00 68.00 68.00

ASML 119.00 69.00 69.00 69.00

ASML 120.00 70.00 70.00 70.00

NYSE

Thursday's 4 P.M. Close
The 2,600 most traded stocks of the day.
Nationwide prices not reflecting late trades elsewhere.
The Associated Press

12 Month	High	Low	Stock	Div Yld	PE	100 High	Low/Latest	Change
A-B
12	12	12	AA	1.2	12	12	12	12
13	13	13	AB	1.3	13	13	13	13
14	14	14	AC	1.4	14	14	14	14
15	15	15	AD	1.5	15	15	15	15
16	16	16	AE	1.6	16	16	16	16
17	17	17	AF	1.7	17	17	17	17
18	18	18	AG	1.8	18	18	18	18
19	19	19	AH	1.9	19	19	19	19
20	20	20	AI	2.0	20	20	20	20
21	21	21	AJ	2.1	21	21	21	21
22	22	22	AK	2.2	22	22	22	22
23	23	23	AL	2.3	23	23	23	23
24	24	24	AM	2.4	24	24	24	24
25	25	25	AN	2.5	25	25	25	25
26	26	26	AO	2.6	26	26	26	26
27	27	27	AP	2.7	27	27	27	27
28	28	28	AQ	2.8	28	28	28	28
29	29	29	AR	2.9	29	29	29	29
30	30	30	AS	3.0	30	30	30	30
31	31	31	AT	3.1	31	31	31	31
32	32	32	AU	3.2	32	32	32	32
33	33	33	AV	3.3	33	33	33	33
34	34	34	AW	3.4	34	34	34	34
35	35	35	AX	3.5	35	35	35	35
36	36	36	AY	3.6	36	36	36	36
37	37	37	AZ	3.7	37	37	37	37
38	38	38	BA	3.8	38	38	38	38
39	39	39	BB	3.9	39	39	39	39
40	40	40	BC	4.0	40	40	40	40
41	41	41	BD	4.1	41	41	41	41
42	42	42	BE	4.2	42	42	42	42
43	43	43	BF	4.3	43	43	43	43
44	44	44	BG	4.4	44	44	44	44
45	45	45	BH	4.5	45	45	45	45
46	46	46	BI	4.6	46	46	46	46
47	47	47	BJ	4.7	47	47	47	47
48	48	48	BK	4.8	48	48	48	48
49	49	49	BL	4.9	49	49	49	49
50	50	50	BM	5.0	50	50	50	50
51	51	51	BN	5.1	51	51	51	51
52	52	52	BO	5.2	52	52	52	52
53	53	53	BP	5.3	53	53	53	53
54	54	54	BQ	5.4	54	54	54	54
55	55	55	BR	5.5	55	55	55	55
56	56	56	BS	5.6	56	56	56	56
57	57	57	BT	5.7	57	57	57	57
58	58	58	BV	5.8	58	58	58	58
59	59	59	BW	5.9	59	59	59	59
60	60	60	BX	6.0	60	60	60	60
61	61	61	BY	6.1	61	61	61	61
62	62	62	BZ	6.2	62	62	62	62
63	63	63	CA	6.3	63	63	63	63
64	64	64	CB	6.4	64	64	64	64
65	65	65	CC	6.5	65	65	65	65
66	66	66	CD	6.6	66	66	66	66
67	67	67	CE	6.7	67	67	67	67
68	68	68	CF	6.8	68	68	68	68
69	69	69	CG	6.9	69	69	69	69
70	70	70	CH	7.0	70	70	70	70
71	71	71	CI	7.1	71	71	71	71
72	72	72	CJ	7.2	72	72	72	72
73	73	73	CK	7.3	73	73	73	73
74	74	74	CL	7.4	74	74	74	74
75	75	75	CM	7.5	75	75	75	75
76	76	76	CN	7.6	76	76	76	76
77	77	77	CO	7.7	77	77	77	77
78	78	78	CP	7.8	78	78	78	78
79	79	79	CQ	7.9	79	79	79	79
80	80	80	CR	8.0	80	80	80	80
81	81	81	CS	8.1	81	81	81	81
82	82	82	CT	8.2	82	82	82	82
83	83	83	CV	8.3	83	83	83	83
84	84	84	CW	8.4	84	84	84	84
85	85	85	CX	8.5	85	85	85	85
86	86	86	CY	8.6	86	86	86	86
87	87	87	CZ	8.7	87	87	87	87
88	88	88	DA	8.8	88	88	88	88
89	89	89	DB	8.9	89	89	89	89
90	90	90	DC	9.0	90	90	90	90
91	91	91	DD	9.1	91	91	91	91
92	92	92	DE	9.2	92	92	92	92
93	93	93	DF	9.3	93	93	93	93
94	94	94	DG	9.4	94	94	94	94
95	95	95	DH	9.5	95	95	95	95
96	96	96	DI	9.6	96	96	96	96
97	97	97	DJ	9.7	97	97	97	97
98	98	98	DK	9.8	98	98	98	98
99	99	99	DL	9.9	99	99	99	99
100	100	100	DM	10.0	100	100	100	100

12 Month	High	Low	Stock	Div Yld	PE	100 High	Low/Latest	Change
M-N
101	101	101	DN	10.1	101	101	101	101
102	102	102	DO	10.2	102	102	102	102
103	103	103	DP	10.3	103	103	103	103
104	104	104	DQ	10.4	104	104	104	104
105	105	105	DR	10.5	105	105	105	105
106	106	106	DS	10.6	106	106	106	106
107	107	107	DT	10.7	107	107	107	107
108	108	108	DV	10.8	108	108	108	108
109	109	109	DW	10.9	109	109	109	109
110	110	110	DX	11.0	110	110	110	110
111	111	111	DY	11.1	111	111	111	111
112	112	112	DZ	11.2	112	112	112	112
113	113	113	EA	11.3	113	113	113	113
114	114	114	EB	11.4	114	114	114	114
115	115	115	EC	11.5	115	115	115	115
116	116	116	ED	11.6	116	116	116	116
117	117	117	EE	11.7	117	117	117	117
118	118	118	EF	11.8	118	118	118	118
119	119	119	EG	11.9	119	119	119	119
120	120	120	EH	12.0	120	120	120	120
121	121	121	EI	12.1	121	121	121	121
122	122	122	EJ	12.2	122	122	122	122
123	123	123	EK	12.3	123	123	123	123
124	124	124	EL	12.4	124	124	124	124
125	125	125	EM	12.5	125	125	125	125
126	126	126	EN	12.6	126	126	126	126
127	127	127	EO	12.7	127	127	127	127
128	128	128	EP	12.8	128	128	128	128
129	129	129	EQ	12.9	129	129	129	129
130	130	130	ER	13.0	130	130	130	130
131	131	131	ES	13.1	131	131	131	131
132	132	132	ET	13.2	132	132	132	132
133	133	133	EV	13.3	133	133	133	133
134	134	134	EW	13.4	134	134	134	134
135	135	135	EX	13.5	135	135	135	135
136	136	136	EY	13.6	136	136	136	136
137	137	137	EZ	13.7	137	137	137	137
138	138	138	FA	13.8	138	138	138	138
139	139	139	FB	13.9	139	139	139	139
140	140	140	FC	14.0	140	140	140	140
141	141	141	FD	14.1	141	141	141	141
142	142	142	FE	14.2	142	142	142	142
143	143	143	FF	14.3	143	143	143	143
144	144	144	FG	14.4	144	144	144	144
145	145	145	FH	14.5	145	145	145	145
146	146	146	FI	14.6	146	146	146	146
147	147	147	FJ	14.7	147	147	147	147
148	148	148	FK	14.8	148	148	148	148
149	149	149	FL	14.9	149	149	149	149
150	150	150	FM	15.0	150	150	150	150
151	151	151	FN	15.1	151	151	151	151
152	152	152	FO	15.2	152	152	152	152
153	153	153	FP	15.3	153	153	153	153
154	154	154	FQ	15.4	154	154	154	154
155	155	155	FR	15.5	155	155	155	155
156	156	156	FS	15.6	156	156	156	156
157	157	157	FT	15.7	157	157	157	157
158	158	158	FV	15.8	158	158	158	158
159	159	159	FW	15.9	159	159	159	159
160	160	160	FX	16.0	160	160	160	160
161	161	161	FY	16.1	161	161	161	161
162	162	162	FZ	16.2	162	162	162	162
163	163	163	GA	16.3	163	163	163	163
164	164	164	GB	16.4	164	164	164	164
165	165	165	GC	16.5	165	165	165	165
166	166	166	GD	16.6	166	166	166	166
167	167	167	GE	16.7	167	167	167	167
168	168	168	GF	16.8	168	168	168	168
169	169	169	GG	16.9	169	169	169	169
170	170	170	GH	17.0	170	170	170	170
171	171	171	GI	17.1	171	171	171	171
172	172	172	GJ	17.2	172	172	172	172
173	173	173	GK	17.3	173	173	173	173
174	174	174	GL	17.4	174	174	174	174
175	175	175	GM	17.5	175	175	175	175
176	176	176	GN	17.6	176	176	176	176
177	177	177	GO	17.7	177	177	177	177
178	178	178	GP	17.8	178	178	178	178
179	179	179	GQ	17.9	179	179	179	179
180	180	180	GR	18.0	180	180	180	180
181	181	181	GS	18.1	181	181	181	181
182	182	182	GT	18.2	182	182	182	182
183	183	183	GV	18.3	183	183	183	183
184	184	184	GW	18.4	184	184	184	184
185	185	185	GX	18.5	185	185	185	185
186	186	186	GY	18.6	186	186	186	186
187	187	187	GZ	18.7	187	187	187	187
188	188	188	HA	18.8	188	188	188	188
189	189	189	HB	18.9	189	189	189	189
190	190	190	HC	19.0	190	190	190	190
191	191	191	HD	19.1	191	191	191	191
192	192	192	HE	19.2	192	192	192	192
193	193	193	HF	19.3	193	193	193	193
194	194	194	HG	19.4	194	194	194	194
195	195	195	HH	19.5	195	195	195	195
196	196	196	HI	19.6	196	196	196	196
197	197	197	HJ	19.7	197	197	197	197
198	198	198	HK	19.8	198	198	198	198
199	199	199	HL	19.9	199	199	199	199
200	200	200	HM	20.0	200	200	200	200
O-P
201	201	201	HN	20.1	201	201	201	201
202	202	202	HO	20.2	202	202	202	202
203	203	203	HP	20.3	203	203	203	203
204	204	204	HQ	20.4	204	204	204	204
205	205	205	HR	20.5	205	205	205	205
206	206	206	HS	20.6	206	206	206	206
207	207	207	HT	20.7	207	207	207	207
208	208	208	HV	20.8	208	208	208	208
209	209	209	HW	20.9	209	209	209	209
210	210	210	HX	21.0	210	210	210	210
211	211	211	HY	21.1	211	211	211	211
212	212	212	HZ	21.2	212	212	212	212
213	213	213	IA	21.3	213	213	213	213
214	214	214	IB	21.4	214	214	214	214
215	215	215	IC	21.5	215	215	215	215
216	216	216	ID	21.6	216	216	216	216
217	217	217	IE	21.7	217	217	217	217
218	218	218	IF	21.8	218	218	218	218
219	219	219	IG	21.9	219	219	219	219
220	220	220	IH	22.0	220	220	220	220
221	221	221	II	22.1	221	221	221	221
222	222	222	IJ	22.2	222	222	222	222
223	223	223	IK	22.3	223	223	223	223
224	224	224	IL	22.4	224	224	224	224
225	225	225	IM	22.5	225	225	225	225
226	226	226	IN	22.6	226	226	226	226
227	227	227	IO	22.7	227	227	227	227
228	228	228	IP	22.8	228	228	228	228
229	229	229	IQ	22.9	229	229	229	229
230	230	230	IR	23.0	230	230	230	230
231	231	231	IS	23.1	231	231	231	231
232	232	232	IT	23.2	232	232	232	232
233	233	233	IV	23.3	233	233	233	233
234	234	234	IW	23.4	234	234	234	234
235	235	235	IX	23.5	235	235	235	235
236	236	236	IY	23.6	236	236	236	236
237	237	237	IZ	23.7	237	237	237	237
238	238	238	JA	23.8	238	238	238	238
239	239	239	JB	23.9	239	239	239	239
240	240	240	JC	24.0	240	240	240	240
241	241	241	JD	24.1	241	241	241	241
242	242	242	JE	24.2	242	242	242	242
243	243	243	JF	24.3	243	243	243	243
244	244	244	JG	24.4	244	244	244	244
245	245	245	JH	24.5	245	245	245	245
246	246	246	JI	24.6	246	246	246	246
247	247	247	JJ	24.7	247	247	247	247
248	248	248	JK	24.8	248	248	248	248
249	249	249	JL	24.9	249	249	249	249
250	250	250	JM	25.0	250	250	250	250
K-L
251	251	251	JN	25.1	251	251	251	251
252	252	252	JO	25.2	252	252	252	252
253	253	253	JP	25.3	253	253	253	253
254	254	254	JQ	25.4	254	254	254	254
255	255	255	JR	25.5	255	255	255	255
256	256	256	JS	25.6	256	256	256	256
257	257	257	JT	25.7	257	257	257	257
258	258	258	JV	25.8	258	258	258	258
259	259	259	JW	25.9	259	259	259	259
260	260	260	JX	26.0	260	260	260	260
261	261	261	JY	26.1	261	261	261	261
262	262	262	JZ	26.2	262	262	262	262
263	263	263	KA	26.3	263	263	263	263
264	264	264	KB	26.4	264

August 6, 1998

For information on how to list your fund, fax Katy Hourst at (33-1) 41 43 92 12 or E-mail : funds@iht.com
To receive free daily quotations for your funds by E-mail : subscribe at e-funds@iht.com

AS - Australian Dollars; AS - Austriian Schilling;
Bf - Belgian Francs; C$ - Canadian Dollars; DM -
Deutsche Marks; Dk - Danish Kroner; Dr - Irish
Pounds; ECU - European Currency Unit; FF -
French Francs; Fmk - Finnish Mark; Ft - Deutsche
Marks; HKD - Hong Kong Dollars; Hkr - Indian Rupee
Lf - Lira; Lit - Lithuanian Litas; Lst - New Zealand
Dollars; Pfg - Pfennig; Sfr - Swiss Franc; SfrS
Singapore Dollars; Sp - Spanish Pesetas; SwK
Swedish Kronor; THB - Thai Baht; Y - Yen;

* - noted  Other Prices N.A. - Not Available
 N.C. - Not Constant * - Estimated suspending $F - stock $F - Cash $F
 Ex-Rtr - Other Price Incl. % profit change
 + no charge - no charge X - exchange n negotiated x-not registered wwithout authority p-middle or bid and offer price, b-bid o-offer g-gross y-price calculated at day prior to settlement z-price offered

Thursday's 4 P.M.

Thursday's 4 P.M.
The 1,000 most traded National Market securities in terms of dollar value, updated twice a year.
The Associated Press.

[illegible]

Line	Label	Unit	Value
1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47
48
49
50
51
52
53
54
55
56
57
58
59
60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70
71
72
73
74
75
76
77
78
79
80
81
82
83
84
85
86
87
88
89
90
91
92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99
100

Age	Sex	Height	Weight	Arm span	Leg	Foot	Hand	Thumb	Index	Middle	Ring	Pinky	Thumb	Index	Middle	Ring	Pinky
1	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
2	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
3	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
4	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
5	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
6	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
7	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
8	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
9	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
10	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
11	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
12	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
13	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
14	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
15	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
16	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
17	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
18	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
19	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
20	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
21	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
22	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"

Age	Sex	Height	Weight	Arm span	Leg	Foot	Hand	Thumb	Index	Middle	Ring	Pinky	Thumb	Index	Middle	Ring	Pinky
1	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
2	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
3	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
4	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
5	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
6	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
7	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
8	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
9	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
10	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
11	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
12	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
13	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
14	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
15	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
16	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
17	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
18	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
19	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
20	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
21	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"
22	M	5' 10"	150	6' 0"	30"	10"	7"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"	2 1/2"	3 1/2"	4 1/2"	5 1/2"	6 1/2"

[illegible]

17	18		19	20	21	22	23	24	25	26	27	28	29	30	31	32	33	34	35	36	37	38	39	40	41	42	43	44	45	46	47	48	49	50	51	52	53	54	55	56	57	58	59	60	61	62	63	64	65	66	67	68	69	70	71	72	73	74	75	76	77	78	79	80	81	82	83	84	85	86	87	88	89	90	91	92	93	94	95	96	97	98	99	100	101	102	103	104	105	106	107	108	109	110	111	112	113	114	115	116	117	118	119	120	121	122	123	124	125	126	127	128	129	130	131	132	133	134	135	136	137	138	139	140	141	142	143	144	145	146	147	148	149	150	151	152	153	154	155	156	157	158	159	160	161	162	163	164	165	166	167	168	169	170	171	172	173	174	175	176	177	178	179	180	181	182	183	184	185	186	187	188	189	190	191	192	193	194	195	196	197	198	199	200	201	202	203	204	205	206	207	208	209	210	211	212	213	214	215	216	217	218	219	220	221	222	223	224	225	226	227	228	229	230	231	232	233	234	235	236	237	238	239	240	241	242	243	244	245	246	247	248	249	250	251	252	253	254	255	256	257	258	259	260	261	262	263	264	265	266	267	268	269	270	271	272	273	274	275	276	277	278	279	280	281	282	283	284	285	286	287	288	289	290	291	292	293	294	295	296	297	298	299	300	301	302	303	304	305	306	307	308	309	310	311	312	313	314	315	316	317	318	319	320	321	322	323	324	325	326	327	328	329	330	331	332	333	334	335	336	337	338	339	340	341	342	343	344	345	346	347	348	349	350	351	352	353	354	355	356	357	358	359	360	361	362	363	364	365	366	367	368	369	370	371	372	373	374	375	376	377	378	379	380	381	382	383	384	385	386	387	388	389	390	391	392	393	394	395	396	397	398	399	400	401	402	403	404	405	406	407	408	409	410	411	412	413	414	415	416	417	418	419	420	421	422	423	424	425	426	427	428	429	430	431	432	433	434	435	436	437	438	439	440	441	442	443	444	445	446	447	448	449	450	451	452	453	454	455	456	457	458	459	460	461	462	463	464	465	466	467	468	469	470	471	472	473	474	475	476	477	478	479	480	481	482	483	484	485	486	487	488	489	490	491	492	493	494	495	496	497	498	499	500	501	502	503	504	505	506	507	508	509	510	511	512	513	514	515	516	517	518	519	520	521	522	523	524	525	526	527	528	529	530	531	532	533	534	535	536	537	538	539	540	541	542	543	544	545	546	547	548	549	550	551	552	553	554	555	556	557	558	559	560	561	562	563	564	565	566	567	568	569	570	571	572	573	574	575	576	577	578	579	580	581	582	583	584	585	586	587	588	589	590	591	592	593	594	595	596	597	598	599	600	601	602	603	604	605	606	607	608	609	610	611	612	613	614	615	616	617	618	619	620	621	622	623	624	625	626	627	628	629	630	631	632	633	634	635	636	637	638	639	640	641	642	643	644	645	646	647	648	649	650	651	652	653	654	655	656	657	658	659	660	661	662	663	664	665	666	667	668	669	670	671	672	673	674	675	676	677	678	679	680	681	682	683	684	685	686	687	688	689	690	691	692	693	694	695	696	697	698	699	700	701	702	703	704	705	706	707	708	709	710	711	712	713	714	715	716	717	718	719	720	721	722	723	724	725	726	727	728	729	730	731	732	733	734	735	736	737	738	739	740	741	742	743	744	745	746	747	748	749	750	751	752	753	754	755	756	757	758	759	760	761	762	763	764	765	766	767	768	769	770	771	772	773	774	775	776	777	778	779	780	781	782	783	784	785	786	787	788	789	790	791	792	793	794	795	796	797	798	799	800	801	802	803	804	805	806	807	808	809	810	811	812	813	814	815	816	817	818	819	820	821	822	823	824	825	826	827	828	829	830	831	832	833	834	835	836	837	838	839	840	841	842	843	844	845	846	847	848	849	850	851	852	853	854	855	856	857	858	859	860	861	862	863	864	865	866	867	868	869	870	871	872	873	874	875	876	877	878	879	880	881	882	883	884	885	886	887	888	889	890	891	892	893	894	895	896	897	898	899	900	901	902	903	904	905	906	907	908	909	910	911	912	913	914	915	916	917	918	919	920	921	922	923	924	925	926	927	928	929	930	931	932	933	934	935	936	937	938	939	940	941	942	943	944	945	946	947	948	949	950	951	952	953	954	955	956	957	958	959	960	961	962	963	964	965	966	967	968	969	970	971	972	973	974	975	976	977	978	979	980	981	982	983	984	985	986	987	988	989	990	991	992	993	994	995	996	997	998	999	1000	1001	1002	1003	1004	1005	1006	1007	1008	1009	1010	1011	1012	1013	1014	1015	1016	1017	1018	1019	1020	1021	1022	1023	1024	1025	1026	1027	1028	1029	1030	1031	1032	1033	1034	1035	1036	1037	1038	1039	1040	1041	1042	1043	1044	1045	1046	1047	1048	1049	1050	1051	1052	1053	1054	1055	1056	1057	1058	1059	1060	1061	1062	1063	1064	1065	1066	1067	1068	1069	1070	1071	1072	1073	1074	1075	1076	1077	1078	1079	1080	1081	1082	1083	1084	1085	1086	1087	1088	1089	1090	1091	1092	1093	1094	1095	1096	1097	1098	1099	1100	1101	1102	1103	1104	1105	1106	1107	1108	1109	1110	1111	1112	1113	1114	1115	1116	1117	1118	1119	1120	1121	1122	1123	1124	1125	1126	1127	1128	1129	1130	1131	1132	1133	1134	1135	1136	1
----	----	--	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	------	---

Thursday's 4 P.M. Close

(Continued)

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

12 Month	High	Low	Stock	Dv	Wt	PE	Stk	100 High	Low	Last	Chge
12.00	30.00	28.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	30.00	28.00	28.00	+1/8
12.00	28.00	26.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	28.00	26.00	26.00	+1/8
12.00	26.00	24.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	26.00	24.00	24.00	+1/8
12.00	24.00	22.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	24.00	22.00	22.00	+1/8
12.00	22.00	20.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	22.00	20.00	20.00	+1/8
12.00	20.00	18.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	20.00	18.00	18.00	+1/8
12.00	18.00	16.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	18.00	16.00	16.00	+1/8
12.00	16.00	14.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	16.00	14.00	14.00	+1/8
12.00	14.00	12.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	14.00	12.00	12.00	+1/8
12.00	12.00	10.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	12.00	10.00	10.00	+1/8
12.00	10.00	8.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	10.00	8.00	8.00	+1/8
12.00	8.00	6.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	8.00	6.00	6.00	+1/8
12.00	6.00	4.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	6.00	4.00	4.00	+1/8
12.00	4.00	2.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	4.00	2.00	2.00	+1/8
12.00	2.00	0.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	2.00	0.00	0.00	+1/8
12.00	0.00	-2.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	0.00	-2.00	-2.00	+1/8
12.00	-2.00	-4.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-2.00	-4.00	-4.00	+1/8
12.00	-4.00	-6.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-4.00	-6.00	-6.00	+1/8
12.00	-6.00	-8.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-6.00	-8.00	-8.00	+1/8
12.00	-8.00	-10.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-8.00	-10.00	-10.00	+1/8
12.00	-10.00	-12.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-10.00	-12.00	-12.00	+1/8
12.00	-12.00	-14.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-12.00	-14.00	-14.00	+1/8
12.00	-14.00	-16.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-14.00	-16.00	-16.00	+1/8
12.00	-16.00	-18.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-16.00	-18.00	-18.00	+1/8
12.00	-18.00	-20.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-18.00	-20.00	-20.00	+1/8
12.00	-20.00	-22.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-20.00	-22.00	-22.00	+1/8
12.00	-22.00	-24.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-22.00	-24.00	-24.00	+1/8
12.00	-24.00	-26.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-24.00	-26.00	-26.00	+1/8
12.00	-26.00	-28.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-26.00	-28.00	-28.00	+1/8
12.00	-28.00	-30.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-28.00	-30.00	-30.00	+1/8
12.00	-30.00	-32.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-30.00	-32.00	-32.00	+1/8
12.00	-32.00	-34.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-32.00	-34.00	-34.00	+1/8
12.00	-34.00	-36.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-34.00	-36.00	-36.00	+1/8
12.00	-36.00	-38.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-36.00	-38.00	-38.00	+1/8
12.00	-38.00	-40.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-38.00	-40.00	-40.00	+1/8
12.00	-40.00	-42.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-40.00	-42.00	-42.00	+1/8
12.00	-42.00	-44.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-42.00	-44.00	-44.00	+1/8
12.00	-44.00	-46.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-44.00	-46.00	-46.00	+1/8
12.00	-46.00	-48.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-46.00	-48.00	-48.00	+1/8
12.00	-48.00	-50.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-48.00	-50.00	-50.00	+1/8
12.00	-50.00	-52.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-50.00	-52.00	-52.00	+1/8
12.00	-52.00	-54.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-52.00	-54.00	-54.00	+1/8
12.00	-54.00	-56.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-54.00	-56.00	-56.00	+1/8
12.00	-56.00	-58.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-56.00	-58.00	-58.00	+1/8
12.00	-58.00	-60.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-58.00	-60.00	-60.00	+1/8
12.00	-60.00	-62.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-60.00	-62.00	-62.00	+1/8
12.00	-62.00	-64.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-62.00	-64.00	-64.00	+1/8
12.00	-64.00	-66.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-64.00	-66.00	-66.00	+1/8
12.00	-66.00	-68.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-66.00	-68.00	-68.00	+1/8
12.00	-68.00	-70.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-68.00	-70.00	-70.00	+1/8
12.00	-70.00	-72.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-70.00	-72.00	-72.00	+1/8
12.00	-72.00	-74.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-72.00	-74.00	-74.00	+1/8
12.00	-74.00	-76.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-74.00	-76.00	-76.00	+1/8
12.00	-76.00	-78.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-76.00	-78.00	-78.00	+1/8
12.00	-78.00	-80.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-78.00	-80.00	-80.00	+1/8
12.00	-80.00	-82.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-80.00	-82.00	-82.00	+1/8
12.00	-82.00	-84.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-82.00	-84.00	-84.00	+1/8
12.00	-84.00	-86.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-84.00	-86.00	-86.00	+1/8
12.00	-86.00	-88.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-86.00	-88.00	-88.00	+1/8
12.00	-88.00	-90.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-88.00	-90.00	-90.00	+1/8
12.00	-90.00	-92.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-90.00	-92.00	-92.00	+1/8
12.00	-92.00	-94.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-92.00	-94.00	-94.00	+1/8
12.00	-94.00	-96.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-94.00	-96.00	-96.00	+1/8
12.00	-96.00	-98.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-96.00	-98.00	-98.00	+1/8
12.00	-98.00	-100.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-98.00	-100.00	-100.00	+1/8
12.00	-100.00	-102.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-100.00	-102.00	-102.00	+1/8
12.00	-102.00	-104.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-102.00	-104.00	-104.00	+1/8
12.00	-104.00	-106.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-104.00	-106.00	-106.00	+1/8
12.00	-106.00	-108.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-106.00	-108.00	-108.00	+1/8
12.00	-108.00	-110.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-108.00	-110.00	-110.00	+1/8
12.00	-110.00	-112.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-110.00	-112.00	-112.00	+1/8
12.00	-112.00	-114.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-112.00	-114.00	-114.00	+1/8
12.00	-114.00	-116.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-114.00	-116.00	-116.00	+1/8
12.00	-116.00	-118.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-116.00	-118.00	-118.00	+1/8
12.00	-118.00	-120.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-118.00	-120.00	-120.00	+1/8
12.00	-120.00	-122.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-120.00	-122.00	-122.00	+1/8
12.00	-122.00	-124.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-122.00	-124.00	-124.00	+1/8
12.00	-124.00	-126.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-124.00	-126.00	-126.00	+1/8
12.00	-126.00	-128.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-126.00	-128.00	-128.00	+1/8
12.00	-128.00	-130.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-128.00	-130.00	-130.00	+1/8
12.00	-130.00	-132.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-130.00	-132.00	-132.00	+1/8
12.00	-132.00	-134.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-132.00	-134.00	-134.00	+1/8
12.00	-134.00	-136.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-134.00	-136.00	-136.00	+1/8
12.00	-136.00	-138.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-136.00	-138.00	-138.00	+1/8
12.00	-138.00	-140.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-138.00	-140.00	-140.00	+1/8
12.00	-140.00	-142.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-140.00	-142.00	-142.00	+1/8
12.00	-142.00	-144.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-142.00	-144.00	-144.00	+1/8
12.00	-144.00	-146.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-144.00	-146.00	-146.00	+1/8
12.00	-146.00	-148.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-146.00	-148.00	-148.00	+1/8
12.00	-148.00	-150.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-148.00	-150.00	-150.00	+1/8
12.00	-150.00	-152.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-150.00	-152.00	-152.00	+1/8
12.00	-152.00	-154.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-152.00	-154.00	-154.00	+1/8
12.00	-154.00	-156.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-154.00	-156.00	-156.00	+1/8
12.00	-156.00	-158.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-156.00	-158.00	-158.00	+1/8
12.00	-158.00	-160.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-158.00	-160.00	-160.00	+1/8
12.00	-160.00	-162.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-160.00	-162.00	-162.00	+1/8
12.00	-162.00	-164.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-162.00	-164.00	-164.00	+1/8
12.00	-164.00	-166.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-164.00	-166.00	-166.00	+1/8
12.00	-166.00	-168.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-166.00	-168.00	-168.00	+1/8
12.00	-168.00	-170.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-168.00	-170.00	-170.00	+1/8
12.00	-170.00	-172.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-170.00	-172.00	-172.00	+1/8
12.00	-172.00	-174.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-172.00	-174.00	-174.00	+1/8
12.00	-174.00	-176.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-174.00	-176.00	-176.00	+1/8
12.00	-176.00	-178.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-176.00	-178.00	-178.00	+1/8
12.00	-178.00	-180.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-178.00	-180.00	-180.00	+1/8
12.00	-180.00	-182.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-180.00	-182.00	-182.00	+1/8
12.00	-182.00	-184.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-182.00	-184.00	-184.00	+1/8
12.00	-184.00	-186.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-184.00	-186.00	-186.00	+1/8
12.00	-186.00	-188.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-186.00	-188.00	-188.00	+1/8
12.00	-188.00	-190.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-188.00	-190.00	-190.00	+1/8
12.00	-190.00	-192.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-190.00	-192.00	-192.00	+1/8
12.00	-192.00	-194.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-192.00	-194.00	-194.00	+1/8
12.00	-194.00	-196.00	Aluminum	15	23	27	27	-194.00	-196.00	-196.00	+1/8
12.00</

[illegible]

WORLD ROUNDUP

FINA Bans Smith From Swim Meets For 4 Years

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — Michelle Smith-De Bruin, who won three swimming gold medals in the Atlanta Olympics, was banned from swimming competition for four years Thursday after being found guilty of tampering with a urine sample.

The international swimming federation, FINA, ruled that Smith manipulated an out-of-competition drug test by spiking her sample with a lethal concentration of alcohol.

The presence of alcohol, which the doping lab found was "in no way compatible with human consumption," suggested a possible attempt to mask the presence of any banned drugs.

Although the Irish swimmer escaped the maximum penalty of a life ban, a four-year suspension would effectively end her career. Smith is 28 and would miss the 2000 Sydney Olympics and the 2001 world championships in Fukuoka, Japan.

The ban goes into effect immediately. Smith is believed in the first world-class athlete ever suspended for manipulating a urine test, as opposed to testing positive for a banned substance.

Smith's lawyer, Peter Lennon, said he would not comment on the ruling until a news conference Friday. The statement said Smith was banned under two rules — one covering a competitor who "uses or takes advantage of a banned procedure" and the other for "use of substances and methods which alter the integrity and validity of urine samples used in doping control."

Smith, who says she has been tested more often than any other international swimmer, underwent an out-of-competition urine test Jan. 10 in Kilkenny County, Ireland.

Two doping control samplers were present while Smith provided the sample. The lab said the sample had a "very strong whiskey odor."

The federation said Thursday that its investigation found that the urine was "manipulated by the swimmer."

Michelle Smith-De Bruin celebrating a victory at the Atlanta Olympics.

Union and organizers of major races met Thursday to discuss the scandal-tainted Tour de France, Agence France-Presse reported from Paris.

The officials of the group, known as UCI, held four hours of discussions with race organizers, but there was no statement after the meeting.

"The UCI will make several important decisions over the next few weeks," said the race director of the Giro d'Italia, Carmine Castellano. "It was not a question of finding solutions today."

Cycling Incidents Reviewed
Officials of the International Cycling

In Home of World Cup, Domestic Duty Restarts

French League Opens Without Stars

By Christopher Clarey
International Herald Tribune

PARIS — The majority of French soccer players return to work on Friday and Saturday as their domestic league begins a new season. But the majority of the French players who won the World Cup will be elsewhere.

Fourteen of the 22 young men who cavorted about the Stade de France after beating Brazil less than a month ago work abroad, in cities such as Turin, London, Madrid and Munich.

French players have been popular abroad since the 1980s, but the exodus has gathered pace since the Bosman ruling set free-market forces in motion in 1995. If the domestic leagues in England, Italy and Spain are better for the movement, the French league is not.

Never the deepest in Europe, it is a poor relation to its neighbors, with their larger television contracts, more sophisticated marketing schemes and lower national rates of taxation.

Of the 11 French who started the final against Brazil, only goalkeeper Fabien Barthez, he of the bald and talismanic pout, will play in the French first division this season, but he, along with young strikers Thierry Henry and David Trezeguet, plays in the principality of Monaco.

It will be an odd and potentially deflating homecoming for those three. After performing in front of 80,000 fans in the Stade de France and waving to hundreds of thousands more as they traveled the Champs-Élysées in the team's open bus, they will return to Stade Louis II in Monaco, which has only 20,000 seats and rarely fills half.

"I knew that the risk of being disappointed after coming back to Monaco existed," Trezeguet said last week. "That's why I spent my ten days of vacation preparing myself mentally."

The vacations were indeed brief for the "champions du monde," and in a sport where the physical demands are ever greater, their biggest challenge this season may not be scoring goals, or in the case of Barthez, denying them. It may be staying healthy and motivated.

"They are going to have very little time to recover," said Arsene Wenger, the coach of Arsenal, the English Premier league champion, of his two fellow Frenchmen, Emmanuel Petit and Patrick Vieira. "But I'm more concerned about their state of mind after having gone through something so emotional. Sometimes victory can make you lazy. That's why one must be very vigilant."

The good news for the six weary world champions who play in Italy, including Zinedine Zidane and the captain, Didier Deschamps, is that Serie A does not begin until mid-September.

Despite the absence of these big draws, there is reason for the French league to feel encouraged. In the last two years, with the World Cup looming, many of the nation's stadiums have been either enlarged or modernized. This, league officials hope, will make them more attractive, especially to the surprisingly large number of women who caught the soccer virus this summer while following Les Bleus.

"Our stadiums are too good now to be left empty," said Noel Le Graet, the

WHERE THE 22 WORLD CHAMPIONS PLAY

Fabien Barthez	Monaco (France)
Bernard Lama	Paris Saint Germain (France)
Lionel Claret	Glasgow Rangers (Scotland)
Didier Deschamps	Paris Saint Germain (France)
Emmanuel Petit	Paris Saint Germain (France)
Patrick Vieira	Paris Saint Germain (France)
David Trezeguet	Monaco (France)
Christophe Dugarry	Monaco (France)
Robert Pirès	Monaco (France)
Stephane Gervais	Newcastle (England)
Bernard Diomède	Arsenal (France)

French league president. "The World Cup has changed people's perception of soccer in France. The image of the sport already improved in recent years but the Cup helped us gain five years in a hurry. We would not have had all these stadiums without it."

L'Olympique Marseille, the club with the largest following in French soccer, has doubled its number of season ticket holders to approximately 35,000. Smaller clubs, such as Lens, last season's surprise champion, also have experienced significant jumps.

Lens will enter the European Champions' League. Metz, last season's equally surprising runner-up, could also qualify to face the likes of Barcelona, Juventus and Arsenal.

Both last important players in the off-season, but when Robert Pires left Metz, he elected to stay in France rather than follow his World Cup teammates abroad. The attacking midfielder was transferred to Marseille for 60 million francs ($10 million).

It was a triumph for the French league and one of several signs that the talent drain is slowing. Despite myriad rumors, Monaco kept Henry and Trezeguet along with star Nigerian striker Victor Ikpeba, and perhaps most significantly, its coach, Jean Tigana.

Tigana was the first choice of the French Football Federation to replace Alain Jaquet as national coach, but Jean-Louis Campora, the Monaco club president, refused to allow Tigana to break the two-year contract he signed in February.

Instead, after a lengthy and not terribly reassuring delay, the federation elected to hire Jaquet's World Cup assistant, Roger Lemerre, in late July.

Lemerre, like Jaquet, is a 50-something technician with ample experience as both a player and coach in the French league. Although his name will stir precious little recognition outside France, he has been on the staff of the national technical director since 1986 and is well-respected by his players and colleagues. But even if he manages to lead France to victory in Euro 2000, he never will be able to repeat what Jaquet, now national technical director, accomplished. You only win the World Cup for the first time once.

"I'm well aware," Lemerre said, "that nothing will be the same again in French soccer. But that's no reason to turn down a good job."

England Collapses

CRICKET Mark Butcher scored 116, but his 10 teammates managed fewer than 100 runs between them as England was bowled out for 230 by South Africa on the first day of the final test in Leeds. The series is tied at 1. England reached 181 for three wickets before collapsing. (AP)

Real Joined 'Super' Talks

SOCCER Real Madrid said it had taken part in talks aimed at setting up a European Superleague. Lorenzo Sanz, the club president, told a Spanish newspaper he had discussed the competition with officials from AC Milan, Marseille and Bayern Munich.

Achimast, a linesman at the World Cup final, faces sanctions in his native South Africa after he showed the same player the yellow card twice in a league match but then forgot to send him off.

The English Premier League is the richest in the world, according to a Thursday report by the accounting firm Deloitte & Touche.

It calculated that the Premier League grossed £464 million ($754 million) in the 1996-97 season, compared with £377 million by Italy's Serie A, £232 million by Spain's Primera Liga, and £209 by France's Division One. German clubs were excluded because of a lack of comparable data. (Reuters)

Angels Discard Fielder

BASEBALL Cecil Fielder, one of the most prolific home run hitters of the '90s, was designated for assignment by Anaheim. Fielder, 34, was hitting .241 with 17 homers. (AP)

NBA and Players Meet

BASKETBALL The National Basketball Association and its players met Thursday for the first time since June 22 for talks on the lockout.

Billy Hunter, the director of the NBA Players Association, said Wednesday that a majority of Women's NBA players have agreed to form a union. (AP)

'Fore!' Some Golfers Glory in the Drive

By Ron Dicker
New York Times Service

Ralph Di Pietro traveled for four hours from Toronto to a driving range in Cicero, New York, for this moment. A zephyr was pushing the flags to attention at the mobile home dealer's across the street. The sky was clearing after a morning thunderstorm. The conditions were such that if the collision of titanium and ball was exactly right, Di Pietro would launch his best shot.

Di Pietro repeatedly bent himself into a pretzel-like shape with an exaggerated backswing and whipped the club from his heels. The balls sprayed everywhere except straight and far.

"At any time, anyone can win it," he said.

This is a weekend routine for Di Pietro, a former minor-league hockey player who satisfies his competitive urges by entering long-drive contests.

Di Pietro's wife, Debbie, with paperback in hand, planted a lawn chair near the tee for what would be an all-day affair. She would follow him the next week to another long-drive contest in Los Angeles.

"I don't want to miss out if he ever does crank it," she said. Tournaments for distance-hitting have flourished on the fringe of the golf boom.

"Everybody wants to see the big hitters," said Randy Souza, co-owner of the Long Drivers of America. "People will follow John Daly and Tiger Woods around even if Corey Pavin is winning."

No one is a better long driver than Jason Zuback. He is a 5-foot-10-inch (1-meter-78-centimeter), 215-pound (98-kilogram) power lifter from Drayton Valley in Alberta, Canada. Zuback has twice won long-drive championships and consistently hammers the ball more than 400 yards (366 meters). Many pros would leap out of their cleats at the thought of driving the ball even 300 yards.

The club head of choice is made of titanium. The shaft is graphite and often longer than that of conventional drivers. The players come in all sizes. Taller athletes naturally generate more leverage, while the shorter hitters like Zuback compensate with strength training to increase their club velocity.

"Imagine Arnold Schwarzenegger with a golf game," said Brian Ciampichini, organizer of the contest in Cicero, New York.

Zuback has become such an attraction that he has given up his job as a pharmacist to give exhibitions. Purists may snuff, Zuback said by telephone, but "typically, they're the people who can't hit it very far."

At the recent gathering in Cicero, Boh Gilkey, 71, haved six hours of saunlike heat to see the hopefuls take their whacks.

"I like to watch guys who do things you can't do," he said.

Three hours into the competition, Gilkey got what he came for. Craig Mabce, who owns an indoor golf range in nearby Binghamton, crushed a ball that disappeared into the ether. Mabce dropped his club in disbelief. "Keep going," he said. "It's out of the airport."

Officials found the ball nestled in a patch of goldenrod. The measurement: 341 yards 1 foot 2 inches (312 meters 17 centimeters). It was no Zuback, but it was enough to send Mabce to the district finals.

SCOREBOARD

BASEBALL

MAJOR LEAGUE STANDINGS

AMERICAN LEAGUE				NATIONAL LEAGUE
Team	W	L	Pct.	Team	W	L	Pct.
New York	60	29	.674	Atlanta	55	39	.588
Boston	56	33	.628	New York	52	32	.617
Baltimore	56	33	.628	Philadelphia	55	37	.597
Tampa Bay	56	33	.628	Los Angeles	55	37	.597
Cleveland	55	39	.588	St. Louis	53	40	.569
Minnesota	51	40	.561	Cincinnati	51	43	.543
Kansas City	51	40	.561	Pittsburgh	51	43	.543
Chicago	49	43	.529
Detroit	46	46	.500
Seattle	30	62	.328

AMERICAN LEAGUE LEADERS

Player	Team	W	L	Pct.
Tim Lincecum	Seattle	10	4	.714
Tim Lincecum	Seattle	10	4	.714
Tim Lincecum	Seattle	10	4	.714

NATIONAL LEAGUE LEADERS

Player	Team	W	L	Pct.
Tim Lincecum	Seattle	10	4	.714
Tim Lincecum	Seattle	10	4	.714
Tim Lincecum	Seattle	10	4	.714

BASEBALL

Team	W	L	Pct.
New York	60	29	.674
Boston	56	33	.628
Baltimore	56	33	.628

BASEBALL

Team	W	L	Pct.
New York	60	29	.674
Boston	56	33	.628
Baltimore	56	33	.628

BASEBALL

Team	W	L	Pct.
New York	60	29	.674
Boston	56	33	.628
Baltimore	56	33	.628

LIVE - Football Friendly

Juventus - Inter Milan - Udinese

tune in today 21.00 (CET)

Eurosport

Eurosport, Europe's No.1 Sports TV Channel, available on cable and satellite

SPORTS

Sosa's 43d Homer Fails to Lift Cubs

Fox and Batista Power Arizona, Handing Wood 1st Home Loss

The Associated Press

Sammy Sosa hit his 43d homer of the season to close within two of Mark McGwire, the major-league leader. In spite of Sosa's homer and the presence on the mound of Kerry Wood, the rookie fastballer who had never lost at home, the Chicago Cubs fell, 10-7, at home against the Arizona Diamondbacks.

NL Roundup

"I have a lot of the year left and I'm not thinking about anything," Sosa said of the pursuit of Roger Maris's home-run record of 61.

Andy Fox and Tony Batista homered for the Diamondbacks, and Andy Benes struck out nine in six innings.

Sosa pulled the Cubs to 5-3 in the third with a two-run homer.

Wood (11-6), who may skip his next start to rest a "dead arm," gave up seven runs and nine hits in six innings.

Cards 5, Brewers 1 The slumping McGwire, who has not hit a home run since July 28, sat out during the St. Louis Cardinals' victory in Milwaukee. His replacement at first base, John Mabry, homered and singled in a run for the Cardinals.

"I didn't pay $80 to see you hit!" a fan yelled at Mabry, who was booed during introductions and again when he stepped to the plate for the first time. But he quickly quieted the crowd of 26,000 by sending Jeff Juden's first pitch into the right-field seats for his seventh homer of the season.

McGwire did not start for only the eighth time in 113 games this season.

"He hasn't had a day off in a while," Mabry said. "The most important part of the game is to keep him fresh."

Mariners 6, Astros 3 Derek Lee hit a three-run homer, and Jesus Sanchez pitched seven solid innings on a 92-degree afternoon in Miami to win for the second time in his past 14 starts.

Sanchez allowed six hits and three runs, but two of them were unearned.

Houston second baseman Craig Biggio sat out the game, ending his streak of 494 consecutive games, second only to Cal Ripken among active players.

Reds 13, Braves 4 Aaron Boone hit a tiebreaking two-run single in the ninth as Cincinnati snapped Atlanta's three-game winning streak.

Dmitri Young drove in four runs for the visiting Reds, including a two-run homer in the first. Ryan Klesko and Javy Lopez hit three-run homers for Atlanta, which squandered leads of 6-3 and 9-6.

Giants 6, Mets 4 In New York, rookie Russ Ortiz pitched eight-plus innings for his first major league victory as San Francisco won despite hitting into a triple play. Ortiz (1-1) allowed six hits, struck out eight and walked four.

Rockies 6, Pirates 2 Jamey Wright pitched a five-hitter for his first complete game of the season and hit his first career home run as Colorado won in Pittsburgh.

Wright had been 0-4 with a 7.17 earned run average in nine starts since June 13.

Wright, batting .189 at the time, finished off a four-run fifth inning with a two-run homer that followed Jeff Reed's two-run double.

Expos 5, Dodgers 1 In Montreal, Carl Pavano pitched six shutout innings, and Scott Livingstone hit a two-run double as the Expos won their third straight.

Wilton Guerrero, obtained from the Dodgers last Friday, scored on Livingstone's first-inning double and on his brother Vladimir's single in the sixth.

Twins 4, Rangers 0 In San Diego, Kevin Brown pitched a five-hitter and tied a club record by winning his 11th straight decision as San Diego handed Philadelphia its seventh straight loss.

It was the fourth complete game and second shutout this season for Brown (14-3), who struck out a career-high 11 and walked one. Brown also doubled, scored and made three nice defensive plays.

Indians' catcher Pat Borders tagging the Angels' Orlando Palmeiro at home for the last out of the fourth.

Candiotti's Knuckleball Deflates Yanks

The Associated Press

Tom Candiotti's knuckleball baffled the Yankees as he threw a four-hitter to snap New York's three-game winning streak.

The Yankees had averaged 11.3 runs in the streak, which ended with the 3-1 loss Wednesday night.

"He knows how to make his knuckleball dance and he knows how to throw it slow," said Darryl Strawberry, who struck out on an excruciatingly slow knuckle to end the game.

Candiotti, throwing some pitches as slow as 50 miles per hour, walked two and struck out six in his second complete game of the season. He won his second straight start after losing nine of his previous 10 decisions.

The only run off Candiotti (7-13) came on Tino Martinez's 18th homer, leading off the fifth. The Yankees outscored the A's, 34-10, in the first three games of the series.

"We threw them fastballs the last couple of nights and that didn't work, so we decided we'd try the other direction," A's manager Art Howe said.

Hideki Irabu lost his second complete game of the season, even though he allowed just two hits for the Yankees. Irabu (10-5) gave up a soft run-scoring single by Rafael Bonifacio in the fifth, and a home run by Rickey Henderson in the eighth.

Orioles 6, Tigers 1 Juan Guzman pitched seven innings of four-hit ball in his Orioles debut, and Rafael Palmeiro hit his fifth career grand slam as Baltimore beat Detroit for a two-game sweep at home.

The Orioles won the season series 10-1, their best single-season record against Detroit in franchise history. Baltimore is 20-5 since the All-Star break.

Guzman gave up one run, struck out two and walked one and has allowed only two earned runs in his last four starts.

Devil Rays 7, White Sox 3 Fred McGriff homered to key a six-run, eighth-inning rally in Tampa Bay's home victory over Chicago.

McGriff began the eighth with his 12th homer to tie the score 2-2 and finished the expansion team's scoring in its most productive inning of the season by singling in a run.

Albert Belle, Frank Thomas and Jeff

Royals 4, Twins 3 Sal Fasano broke out of a slump with a three-run homer, and Jose Offerman hit a solo shot, extending his hitting streak to 24 games, as Kansas City's won in Minneapolis.

Fasano, hitless in 12 at-bats and hitting .114 over 15 games, homered off Frank Rodriguez with two outs in the fifth inning to help Kansas City to its fifth victory in six games.

Rangers 4, Blue Jays 3 Texas trailed Toronto, 3-2, entering the bottom of the ninth. Juan Gonzalez tied the game with a solo home run, then Mike Simms drove in the winning run with a pinch-hit single.

It was Gonzalez's 32d homer of the season and took his major-league leading run batted in total to 117.

Indians 6, Angels 5 Manny Ramirez hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning as Cleveland ended a five-game losing streak with a victory in Anaheim.

Quirky Strike Zones? Part of the Game

By Thomas Heath

Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — The Detroit Tigers cried foul over the generous strike zone accorded Baltimore Oriole pitcher Mike Mussina, but the American League's umpiring supervisor shrugged off complaints, saying differing strike zones were part of the game.

"Every umpire has his own strike zone," said Marty Springstead, the AL executive director of umpiring.

Long one of the most hotly debated aspects of the game, the size and location of the strike zone became particularly contentious for the Tigers on Tuesday night, when Mussina pitched a two-hit shutout. Tiger manager Buddy Bell and outfielder Bobby Higginson were ejected in the sixth inning, and outfielder Luis Gonzalez went in the eighth after complaining about umpire John Hirschbeck's strike zone.

Television replays appeared to indicate that some pitches Hirschbeck called strikes were several inches wide of the plate. Oriole outfielder Eric Davis also complained to Hirschbeck after striking out late in the game.

Springstead acknowledged Wednesday that Hirschbeck had a generous strike zone, but added, "he is a very consistent umpire. There are no big surprises."

He also said it was the responsibility of every player to know an umpire's strike zone, just as players followed each other's individual strengths and weaknesses. "I'm sure they scout umpires also," Springstead said.

The 1998 Official Baseball Rules define the strike zone as "that area over home plate the upper limit of which is a horizontal line at the midpoint between the top of the shoulders and the top of the uniform pants, and the lower level is a line at the hollow beneath the kneecap. The Strike Zone shall be determined from the batter's stance as the batter is prepared to swing at a pitched ball."

Springstead said the last sentence was important because, as the batter prepared to swing, several things came into play that affected the definition of the strike zone: the player's stance as he prepared to swing, the umpire's position and the pitch being thrown.

"The strike zone varies because you are judging the strike zone when they are offering to hit the ball," Springstead said.

According to Springstead, there is room for interpretation about the width of the strike zone, although the rule book definition indicates that its width is that of home plate, which is 17 inches. Springstead said only a portion of the ball must pass over the edge of the plate, or the ball might move suddenly, or the player might move, all factors that went into an umpire's instantaneous determination of whether it was a strike.

"Strike zones are a very hard thing to define. People think you can take the rule book and paste it up on home plate and that's your strike zone," he said. "People don't think of all the variables that come into it. You've got guys who bat from the left, guys who bat from the right, knuckleball throwers, fastballs, curveballs. You have umpires who are 6-6 (1.98 meters), or 5-10."

That didn't make Higginson, the Tiger outfielder, any happier. "When you start calling strikes on pitches a foot outside," he said, "it's physically impossible to hit."

Cowboys' Facelift Begins in a Sauna

By Jody Goldstein

Washington Post Service

WICHITA FALLS, Texas — Most Texans know Wichita Falls simply as a stopover on the drive from Houston to the mountains of Colorado. It's an oasis of chain restaurants and cheap motels, just minutes from the Oklahoma border, hours into the vast nothingness of west Texas.

The town is particularly proud of its "Hotter Than Hell" bicycle race, which takes place in August in temperatures that often top 105 degrees Fahrenheit (40 degrees centigrade). But this summer, Wichita Falls also can boast about luring Jerry Jones and his Dallas Cowboys into its sauna.

It's the perfect change for the National Football League team desperately hoping for an image makeover, a one-month sentence in a town that has more churches than bars, more strip malls than strip clubs.

"I guess the locals here are pretty proud of their heat," quarterback Troy Aikman said after a full week of 100-plus temperatures.

Until the Cowboys came to town, there wasn't much else to brag about. But with the Cowboys came fans and national media exposure and suddenly this cultureless town is in the national spotlight. It doesn't matter to the citizens that they are opening their arms to a team that had one player escape a jail sentence after he admitted to recreational drug use and extramarital sex. Another missed much of last season after a league suspension for violating the substance-abuse policy. Still others have been involved in paternity suits and minor scrapes with the law.

But that was before Camp Gailey. When the new Cowboy coach, Chan Gailey, gives his players Sundays off, it's not to let them sleep off the effects of Saturday night, but because the born-again Christian wants to attend church.

Come are the Barry Switzer days, when practices might have ended early and coaches and players were spotted horsing around on the sideline. Gailey is a precision guy. When he first got to camp, he walked off the number of steps between the player dorms and the cafeteria.

When he calls a news conference at 3 P.M., he waits outside the door until the big hand firmly rests on the 12. When he sets a team rule, he expects to be obeyed.

"Now we've got a coach who's got different practice structure, different ways he wants to do things and there's tremendous change going on within our organization," Aikman said. "With that comes enthusiasm. Yet, we all realize it all comes down to whether we win football games."

In previous years, the Cowboys earned respect by letting their on-field actions overshadow their off-field problems. But after last year's 6-10 record, the Cowboys need more than just their attitudes revamped.

The first step is an offensive overhaul, which is why Jones, the team owner, brought in the former Pittsburgh Steelers offensive coordinator as his new head coach. Gailey is the guy who defied critics by turning Kordell Stewart into an NFL quarterback and a guy who hopes to bring a No. 20-ranked offense back into prominence.

He'll start by giving the Cowboys a new look. It won't simply be Emmitt Smith pushing through holes and Michael Irvin lining up on the right side to catch Aikman's passes. The Cowboys' days of winning by sheer physical dominance are over and coaching is now a priority.

"When you do things sometimes over and over and over, you're bound to get stale," said Smith, who had 25 touchdowns in Dallas's 1995 Super Bowl season, but only four last year. "Sometimes you need to make a change. We ran that offense a long time and obviously it was about time for teams to start catching up to what we were doing. They had a lot of tape to watch."

"Over the past couple of years, it was an ego thing: 'We're going to do this. You just have to stop it.' And they stopped it."

Gailey arrived in Texas with a playbook the size of the Dallas area telephone directory and even long-time veterans again became students of the game.

The new look will feature some of the old, but will add Aikman in the shotgun, Irvin coming out of the backfield and more zone blocking in the running game. And don't be surprised to see a trick play or two.

"I felt like a freshman in college," Irvin said after the Cowboys' first exhibition game, a 20-19 loss to Seattle. "I was so nervous. I was at home looking at the playbook and trying to make sure I knew where I was going on every play."

The defense won't undergo as many changes since Jones elected to keep his defense in the hands of coordinator Dave Campo, who retained most of his staff.

The core from those three Super Bowl teams remains intact, which means two things for the Cowboys — they have some talent and that talent is aging.

"The window of opportunity is closing with the guys we're accustomed to playing with and to seeing," Aikman said.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"I DON'T THINK HE'S VERY HUNGRY, DID YOU SEE HE WAS FULL OF BALONEY."

JUMBLE

Unscramble these four letters to form words. Write the words in the boxes below.

EPPIR

HINEW

ROHRO

TAPECK

Print answers here: A

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

PEANUTS

IT'S A NEW BALL. SEE? I'LL THROW IT, AND YOU'LL CHASE IT...

WE'LL HAVE MORE FUN THAN YOU'VE EVER HAD IN YOUR WHOLE LIFE!

ALL RIGHT, I LIE. IT'S NOT A NEW BALL!

YOU CAN'T INTIMIDATE ME, GARFIELD!

NO MATTER HOW HARD YOU TRY!

AND I'M GUESSING YOU AREN'T TRYING REALLY HARD!

BEETLE! TAKE OFF THOSE HEADPHONES AND GET TO WORK!!

HEY! WHADDYA DOING?!

TURNING DOWN THE VOLUME.

WHAT IS THE NAME OF THAT ACTRESS? HIS FACE IS FAMILIAR!

HONEY, PLEASE, YOU'VE BEEN GOING ON ABOUT THAT MOVIE DURING THE MOVIE.

BUT IT'S RIGHT ON THE TIP OF... I'VE GOT IT! IT'S CHARLES DUNING!

THANK HEAVENS THAT'S OVER!

NOW WHAT MOVIE ARE WE WATCHING AGAIN? DON'T TELL ME, I'LL GET IT...

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

CALVIN AND HOBBS

WHERE WERE YOU WHEN I CALLED AND CALLED AND CALLED YOUR OWNERS? I'M SURE.

I DRIFTED AWAY ON MY BALLOON AND IT POPPED, BUT DON'T WORRY. I HAD MY TRANSFORMER, SO AFTER I MISTAKENLY TURNED MYSELF INTO A SAFE, I TRANSFORMED INTO A LIGHT BULB AND ZIPPED BACK HOME INSTANTANEOUSLY!

HOW DID THIS HAPPEN?

I WAS CLEANING MY BOW.

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

WIZARD OF ID

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

Answers: EPPER, HINEW, ROHRO, TAPECK

POSTCARD

A 1945 Beaujolais?

By Frank J. Priol
New York Times Service

ROMANCHE-THORINS, France — In Georges Dubouef's Beaujolais museum here there is a fading pre-World War I photo of mustachioed workers posing at a local manganese mine with their picks and shovels.

The mine and miners are long gone, but the manganese remains in the soil, extracted these days almost exclusively by grape vines. It is the mineral that gives long life to the most important local wine, Moulin-a-Vent, the king of Beaujolais.

I visited to take Dubouef up on his claim that, despite what the books say, not all Beaujolais is meant to be drunk young and that, in fact, some can have long, distinguished lives. Especially Moulin-a-Vent.

Beaujolais is one of the world's most popular wines. Some 15 million cases of it are produced every year, almost all of it consumed by the time the next vintage rolls around.

Most of this river is simple Beaujolais or the slightly fuller Beaujolais Villages — fresh, fruity wines, definitely meant to be drunk young. In some years, as much as half of all simple Beaujolais may be sold as Beaujolais nouveau, bottled less than three months after the grapes are picked. About 25 percent of each vintage consists of 10 "cru" wines, which carry the names of the towns or areas from which they come. These are the finest Beaujolais; richer in flavor, higher in alcohol, and longer lasting. They are: Brouilly, Cotes de Brouilly, Chénas, Chiroubles, Fleurie, Julienas, Morgon, Regnie, St. Amour and Moulin-a-Vent.

It would seem reasonable to have had the tasting somewhere in Moulin-a-Vent but there is no town of Moulin-a-Vent. The special soils that produce Moulin-a-Vent are found in both Chénas and Romaneche-Thorins. The wine takes its name from a 15th-century windmill that is still standing.

At the turn of the century, the villagers of Romaneche-Thorins and of Chénas fought constantly, accusing each other of mislabeling their wines. In 1924, the courts finally fixed the limits of Moulin-a-Vent, spanning both towns.

The wine of Moulin-a-Vent has little in common with the wines of the more southerly Beaujolais communes, even though it is made from the same grape, the gamay. This is due to the rich soil, to different vinification techniques and, in some instances, to barrel aging.

Most Beaujolais is made by a technique called carbonic maceration. The hand-picked grapes are not crushed, but are placed in vats. Grapes at the bottom burst because of the weight. That juice begins to ferment, warming the vat and causing fermentation inside the unbroken grapes.

Eventually all the grapes break open and the skins float to the top. They are pumped over several times a day except in Moulin-a-Vent where racks hold them under the surface of the new wine. This slows down the fermentation, extracting even more flavor, color and tannins. The result is a wine ready for barrel aging and a long life thereafter.

At a table set out under the great plane trees in Chénas, we began to work through a series of Moulin-a-Vents. Starting with a 1997, hardly ready to drink, we tasted back through wines from 1995, 1990, 1985, 1975, 1973, 1947 and 1945.

The wines were Dubouef's except for the two or three oldest. They were from a competitor, Chateau Des Jacques, a Moulin-a-Vent producer in Romaneche-Thorins. It was recently purchased by Maison Louis Jadot, a Burgundy firm seeking a foothold in Beaujolais.

Accepted wisdom holds that as Beaujolais gets older it begins to resemble Burgundy. Discussing Moulin-a-Vent a few years ago, the English wine expert Clive Coates wrote: "This is absolute rubbish."

Dubouef disagrees. "Tasted by itself, an old Beaujolais, especially one aged in wood, could appear to be Burgundy," he said. But he added that if an aged Beaujolais and a Burgundy were placed side by side and tasted, a wine aficionado would discern the difference.

Dubouef, 65, has been making Beaujolais for most of his life. Drawing on some 400 growers and 13 cooperatives, he annually produces about 10 percent of all Beaujolais, including about six different Moulin-a-Vents, several of which are all or partially aged in oak barrels. Just like Burgundy.

As our tasting showed, good old Beaujolais can be very good indeed. The 1985 was still young, and the wines from the 1970s were at the peak of their maturity. The wines from the 1940s (50-year-old Beaujolais!) were undoubtedly old but they had fruit, good acid, richness and a lovely bouquet. They still displayed the uncomplicated charm of fine Beaujolais, faded but unmistakable.

I would have given the 1945 a few points over the 1947 had anyone asked me. No one did. Who quibbles when such rare and memorable wines are to be savored on a shady country terrace on a summer day?

'Solid Gold Hero': A Re-evaluation of Lindbergh

By Dinitia Smith
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Charles Lindbergh's flight across the Atlantic in 1927, cotton wool in his ears, a mirror stuck to his plane with gum, lasted only 33 and a half hours. But when he landed in Paris, he was compared to Jesus and to the mythical hero Icarus, who flew too close to the sun — only Lindbergh had survived.

"He was the first modern media superstar," said A. Scott Berg, author of "Lindbergh," an exhaustive new biography, nine years in the making, that will be published in September. Lindbergh lived on as a blue-eyed symbol of American innocence, an image that was later sullied by his troubling statements about Jews even as Nazi persecution grew in Germany.

Lindbergh and his wife, the author Anne Morrow Lindbergh, seemed to have an ideal marriage. Berg, the first writer to be given unrestricted access to Lindbergh's papers by his family, discovered a more complex picture. Mrs. Lindbergh is 92 and lives in Connecticut.

"A lot of Lindbergh's behavior took my breath away," said Berg, the author of "Max Perkins: Editor of Genius" and "Goldwyn: A Biography." He was capable of astonishing coldness toward his family, with moments of sadistic behavior. He could not express his grief over his son's kidnapping and death and insisted that his wife cry in private.

But in the end, Berg said, he admired the man. "He performed a death-defying deed. He never cheapened himself by selling out. In fact, he kept making his life one of purpose. For us living in a tiny age of celebrity, here is a solid gold hero."

Lindbergh is an immense subject for any biographer. "It was America's moment in the sun," Berg said of Lindbergh's triumph. "He was brave, young, extremely handsome. There was not a bad photograph to be taken of him. It was the moment when the media exploded. They had talking pictures, the radio could spread news." He became, Berg writes, "a blank screen onto which each person projected his own best images of man."

Lindbergh is a figure Americans can never quite let go of. Berg lived Lindbergh's life, visiting his ancestral farm in Sweden, lying in the bed he used in Paris, digging through his nearly 2,000 boxes of papers at Yale.

"Lindbergh was full of surprises for me," Berg said, "the extent to which he did medical research," for instance. "I was not aware of the full extent of his contributions to rocketry and conservation. He wrote six books and won a Pulitzer and became a wonderful writer. I didn't realize the breadth and depth of his interests."

Charles Lindbergh's biographer, A. Scott Berg, with a bust of the aviator.

The revelations began with Lindbergh's childhood. "He made it seem like Huck Finn on the Mississippi," Berg said. But Lindbergh "had a very lonely, isolated childhood, much of it spent in Washington," where his father, C.A. Lindbergh Sr., was a congressman from Minnesota. "His father was always trying to make a man out of him. He teased him to tears."

Lindbergh's parents, Berg said, "were locked in a bitter marriage." His mother, Evangeline Lodge Land, had rages and was probably mentally ill. Mother and child were close. When he went to the University of Wisconsin, she lived with him. At age 25, Lindbergh had still never dated.

The emotionally stunted young man was drawn to aviation partly, Berg writes, because "aviation created a brotherhood of casual acquaintances — people constantly coming and going — in which he felt comfortable."

After Lindbergh became the first man to fly solo across the Atlantic nonstop, he grew wealthy. He was an adviser to the precursor of TWA and to Pan American World Airways. Anne Morrow's teacher, Mina Curtiss, said that had it not been for the flight, Lindbergh would "be in charge of a gasoline station on the outskirts of St. Louis."

In 1929, Lindbergh married Anne Morrow, the daughter of Dwight Morrow, a partner of J.P. Morgan and ambassador to Mexico. In 1930, Charles Jr. was born.

Berg interviewed the baby's nurse, Betty Gow, in Scotland, who described "that little bit of sadism" in Lindbergh. Following upper-class custom, the Lindberghs left the baby for long periods, and on one return, Berg said, he did not recognize them. To toughen him, Lindbergh put him in his playpen outdoors and let him cry, in a sense repeating his own father's behavior.

From the birth, there had been kidnapping threats. As is well known, on March 1, 1932, Gow discovered his crib empty. A kidnapper's note was found. Lindbergh tried frantically to negotiate a release. But the baby was found dead, apparently dropped by the kidnapper as he climbed down a ladder. Berg reveals intimate details of Lindbergh's behavior during this time. "Anne Lindbergh never once saw her husband cry," he writes. "That is the most devastating line in the book," Berg said. Eventually a carpenter, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, was convicted of "the crime of the century," and executed.

Some speculated that Hauptmann was innocent. Berg said he began hoping to clear him: "That would have been news." But he read through police reports and interviewed Hauptmann's widow, Anna, and believes Hauptmann was guilty. "There was a mountain of evidence," Berg said, including the ladder traced to Hauptmann, experts' testimony on the ransom notes and serial numbers on money Hauptmann spent.

The Lindberghs fled to Europe and had five other children.

The most controversial part of Lindbergh's life began when he came under the influence of Alexis Carrel, a Nobel Prize-winning doctor and physiologist with whom he developed a tissue perfusion pump to keep organs alive outside the body. Carrel believed in voluntary sterilization and eugenics and that "the most highly civilized races" are white.

During the 1930s, Lindbergh inspected the Luftwaffe, which he believed would be a key element in a German victory in war. The Lindberghs were entertained by Goering, and Lindbergh received the Service Cross of the German Eagle. In a letter written in 1937, Lindbergh said Hitler was "undoubtedly a great man, and I believe has done much for the German people."

In 1939, the Lindberghs returned to the United States. Lindbergh joined the group America First, which opposed involvement in the European war. In a famous speech in Des Moines, Iowa, in 1941, Lindbergh said: "It is not difficult to understand why Jewish people desire the overthrow of Nazi Germany."

"The persecution they suffered in Germany," he went on, "would be sufficient to make bitter enemies of any race."

But he continued: "Their greatest danger to this country lies in their large ownership and influence in our motion pictures, our press, our radio and our government." Some of his writings were edited to soften his opinions.

Berg, who is Jewish, said: "The anti-Semitic material was less than I expected. If the definition of an anti-Semite is someone who hates Jews, then he was not anti-Semitic. If anti-Semitism means viewing Jews as different, as other than American, as the Other, then yes, he was anti-Semitic." Berg added: "Lindbergh certainly bought into traditional anti-Semitic stereotyping of Jews controlling the media and exerting undue influence."

PEOPLE

THE New York town house of the pop artist Andy Warhol, where he lived until his death in 1987, was designated a "cultural landmark" by a nonprofit architectural group. The ceremony designating the house a landmark lasted precisely 15 minutes, in homage to the artist's proclamation that "everyone will be world famous for 15 minutes."

Archaeologists in Athens have come between Calvin Klein and the fashion shows he wanted to stage at two of the city's most treasured ancient sites, including the Agora. Klein's idea was rejected. "Only artistic shows are allowed at the sites, and a fashion show is not an artistic show," said Mary Pandou, director of the archaeological sites for the Central Archaeological Committee.

It wasn't a grudge match, though Debbie Reynolds called it a sad ending: The World Wrestling Federation has bought her bankrupt hotel-casino in Las Vegas for $9 million. Reynolds, 66, a movie star for a half century, appeared upset by the sale figure. "They bought a property for $9 million that was worth $22 million," she said, adding, "This is a sad ending to a lot of hard work and special dreams."

Some 100 admirers of Marilyn Monroe gathered Wednesday in a Los Angeles cemetery to mark the 36th anniversary of the actress's death. "Marilyn touches all of us in some way through her spirit," said Greg Schreiner, founder and president of the Marilyn Remembered fan club. The annual event began 16 years ago.

A rare Gibson Sunburst guitar that the rocker Jimi Hendrix used on the single "All Along the Watchtower" sold in London for $32,600, topping the bidding at a musical auction. Hendrix's guitar had been expected to fetch double that price at the sale, at which one of Eric Clapton's guitars went for $8,000. Accolades of Elvis Presley's first recording sessions in 1954 achieved record prices. Presley's "That's All Right (Mamma)" fetched $27,000.

Glenn Close and Marisa Tomei will be joined by actresses from Bosnia-Herzegovina in a production of Eve Ensler's play "Necessary Targets," the story of women traumatized by the war in the former Yugoslavia, on Saturday at the National Theater in Sarajevo.

Editor's Note: Prince Ernst August of Hannover has issued a formal denial of an account published in our People column on Aug. 5, which said he had been fined for beating a photographer who was trying to take pictures of him with Princess Caroline of Monaco. We publish his denial in accordance with Article 13 of the French law of July 29, 1881. The German court hearing the case agreed to drop the charges provided the prince paid the equivalent of $50,800 to two charitable organizations and to the state of Lower Saxony.

THEY CAME TO PLAY — The artist formerly known as Prince being mobbed by fans as he and his wife, Mayte Garcia-Nelson, arrived in Malaga, Spain.

(say yes)

and use AT&T DirectSM Service. With the world's most powerful network you get fast, clear, reliable connections from anywhere. Plus you'll always have the option of an operator who speaks your language. All it takes is your AT&T Calling Card or credit card, and you're well on your way. So you can give everyone back home a ring.

For easy calling worldwide:

1. Just dial the AT&T Access Number for the country you are calling from.
2. Dial the phone number you're calling.
3. Dial your card number.

AT&T Access Numbers
Austria	022-982-011	Greece	00-800-1311
Belgium	0-800-100-10	Ireland	1-800-520-000
Czech Republic	00-42-000-101	Israel	1-800-94-84-84
Egypt (Cairo)	010-0200	Italy	172-1011
France	0-800-99-0011	Netherlands	0800-422-9111
Germany	0130-0010	Russia (Moscow)	735-6642
		Switzerland	0800-422-9111
		United Kingdom	0800-422-9111

For access numbers not listed above, ask any operator for AT&T Direct Service, or visit our Web site at: www.att.com/traveler

It's all within your reach.

Credit card calling subject to availability. Payment terms subject to your credit card agreement. Bold-faced countries permit country-to-country calling outside the U.S. Collect calling is available to the U.S. only. Country-to-country rates consist of the cost of a call to the U.S. plus an additional charge based on the country you are calling. You can call the U.S. from all countries listed above. Pay phone deposit. A limited availability. Calling available to most countries. Public phones require local coin payment during the call. *Dial "02" first, outside Cairo. Additional charges apply outside Moscow. DUKA UK access number in N. Ireland. *If call does not complete, use 0800-013-0011. ©1998 AT&T.